A Correction.
Two Birthdays.
They Approve Machinery.
Alcohol, Lottery, What Next?

By ARTHUR BRISBANE

IT WAS stated here that Senator Norris, of Nebraska, one of the best workers that the American people have, disapproved the President's action in directing Mr. Douglas, director of the budget, "to see to it that emergency expenditures are made wisely, and that the people whose taxes must pay for those expenditures get reasonable value for their money."

This statement was made on mistaken information. Senator Norris wants it understood that he most heartily approves of every effort to insure wise spending of the public funds, no matter through what agency.

TWO BIRTHDAYS close together, one today, January 27, that of the former German Kaiser, William Hohenzollern, now seventy-five years old. The other, on Tuesday, that of President Roosevelt, who will be fifty-two years old.

At his birthday state dinner the former Kaiser, surrounded by his family, will wear the magnificent uniform of a German field marshal.

No detail of costume will be lacking, but the army and fleet that he commanded are gone, the empire that Bismarck put together for his grandfather has become a dictatorship in the hands of an unknown young Austrian parvenu.

ON THIS magnificent uniform, the former Kaiser will wear magnificent decorations, some given him, perhaps, by the late Russian Czar, now murdered, his empire in the hands of Communists; others given him by the still living former King of Spain, who has lost his kingdom to other political experimenters.

He will wear, presumably, none of the decorations given him by his grandmother, Queen Victoria, or his uncle, the late King Edward the Seventh. Bitter memories must be associated with those decorations.

It must be a bitter seventy-fifth birthday for the former Kaiser.

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT, on Tuesday, will celebrate his fifty-second birthday, ONLY the fifty-second.

Perhaps he feels that fifty-two is "old." Thirty years from now he will know that fifty-two is pathetically young.

He has only just crossed the threshold of his real life work, and will wonder, when the sun rises to tell him that he is fifty-two, what the seven years from March 4, 1934, will bring.

IN FORMER days, a man fifty-two was "old, a greybeard." Few lived to attain "so great an age." In the Middle Ages, the second largest city in France had not one man as old as fifty, and La Boette, Montaigne's devoted friend, could say, when near to death, that, after all, he had lived thirty-nine years, "a good, long life."

This country hopes that Franklin D. Roosevelt will live far beyond the Biblical three score and ten, which, for modern men of power, is "youth," and retain the courage that has enabled him to act in a moment of most deadly stagnation.

UNITED MINE WORKERS decide to approve the machine age, and object to "returning to pick and shovel methods of mining as a means of increasing employment."

Eighteen hundred delegates argued about machinery for two hours. They decided that it was not to blame for labor's troubles.

It was time for somebody to say a sensible word concerning machinery, man's greatest blessing, ready to free him from slavery when he ceases to be a covetous, ignorant savage.

THOSE THAT advocate doing away with machinery, returning to "good old days of the pick and shovel," might go farther back, to the mining days in England when women miners crawled on their hands and knees through low shafts, a chain around their necks passing under their bodies between their legs, attached to a small car loaded with coal, which they dragged to the surface.

Those ladies possibly might have been persuaded to protest against a little electric or gasoline car to drag up the coal.

CONGRESSMAN KENNEY, Democrat from New Jersey, introduces a bill to make lotteries legal, the United States to institute a lottery "to be conducted by the veterans' administration." Criminal laws against lotteries would be suspended, and the public gambling instinct would be utilized to provide revenue.

If Satan is a reality, with hoofs, a forked tail and horns, he must grin when he sees a highly civilized Christian nation relying partly for its expenses on alcohol and suggesting gambling as an additional provider.

Saloons, then lotteries. Would gambling houses to raise funds come next, and what would be the next natural source of revenue, according to the old mining town traditions?

Will some earnest Congressman suggest a nation-wide chain of government dance halls, with obliging ladies, highly colored and ornamented, to help in the government's expense?

A TINY cloud appears in the financial sky, only a little two hundred million cloud that taxpayers will have to take care of in the course of the year. That represents increased annual charges for interest on the nice new bonds that the government is printing.

Two hundred million dollars means nothing in these days, although once it would almost have built the Panama Canal, about which we made such a fuss.

The two hundred added millions will be extracted somehow

War Pictures Preparedness Lesson, Says Gen. Cronkhite

Five More Pages in Tomorrow's Sunday Sun-Telegraph

Maj. Gen. Adelbert Cronkhite, retired, wartime commander of the 80th Division, A. E. F., in which thousands of Pittsburgh men served, sees a preparedness lesson portrayed in the uncensored World War pictures being published in the Sunday Sun-Telegraph and other Hearst newspapers. Gen. Cronkhite asserts:

"These pictures of the hardships and misery of war should be a lesson in preparedness, not in pacifism.

"The horror they portray is a result, largely, of the fact that our men were not trained and we were not prepared. If we are prepared as we should be, other nations will think twice before attempting to fight us.

"It is criminal not to be prepared. The Sun-Telegraph is doing the country a great service by impressing this fact upon the minds of our citizens."

MARY PICKFORD FLEES FROM THREAT

KIDNAP FEAR ROUSED BY NOTE AND TRAILERS

Actress Under Guard At Cape Cod Home Of Editor

International News Service.

BOSTON, Jan. 27. — Leaving Boston under police escort after receiving a "crank" letter and complaining of being followed by a strange man and woman, Mary Pickford, "America's Sweetheart" of the films, was near Falmouth on Cape Cod today, as a guest at the home of a magazine editor and his wife.

Acting Chief of Police Arthur F. Hamiltvon and Patrolman Ralph Ervskine, of Falmouth, maintained an iron-clad guard today at the estate

The letter, written in a scrawling hand, was addressed to "Mrs. Mary Pickford Douglas." It was discounted as the work of a crank who apparently confused the first and last names of her husband, Douglavs Fairbanks.

ACTRESS DISTURBED

Miss Pickford, however, was greatly disturbed over the annoyance by the man and woman. She told police the couple had followed her persistently between her hotel and a Boston theater where she was making a personal appearance this week. They invaded both places, she said, attempting to talk to her.

The woman, stylishly dressed and with a cultured voice, threatened:

"We will see you before the night is over."

The two officers assigned to Miss Pickford, escorted her by automobile to Onset Bridge, where they turned their charge over to a man in uniform, whom they thought to be a state trooper.

Miss Pickford's two private detectives had been sent ahead to Falmouth, and, it was revealed, this was the reason why the Boston police were asked to escort her to Cape Cod.

The two detectives have accompanied her since she left Hollywood for a tour of the country. Before she left California she was threatened, and it was said, she has since taken out an insurance policy against kidnaping.

'I CAN'T TALK'

Reached at the Falmouth home of her friends, the actress refused to discuss the affair, saying:

"I am so tired. And I can't talk to you."

Asked why she had the police escort, Miss Pickford answered:

"That is something I can't discuss."

She was visited at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Fulton Oursler. Oursler is the editor of Liberty Magazine, and his wife is a writer, Grace Perkins.

Senate Ready to Pass Devaluation Bill Today

WASHINGTON, Jan. 27.—It is understood that in response to pressure from international bankers, led by J. P. Morgan & Co., and by representatives of the Bank of England and other foreign bankers, an agreement to fix the value at 60 cents has been entered in to by the administration.

Indications of this are seen in the drop of the English pound during the past few days.

It was said here that the international banking group, headed by the Morgan company, in return for the 60-cent stabilization figure, have pledged themselves to underwrite between five and six billion dollars of financing which the government must undertake before the end of the fiscal year.

The British government, it was declared, has agreed to stabilize the pound sterling if President Roosevelt limits dollar devaluation to 60 per cent of its former gold content.

Europe Seeks to Involve U. S. In Its Dispute Under Guise Of 'Co-operation' With League

This is the last of six articles by William Hillman, London representative and chief of staff of the European correspondents of the Hearst newspapers.

Mr. Hillman's articles, obtained from state documents or authoritative statements of foreign government officials, probably will give America a clearer insight into the attitude and objectives of the Washington administration than can be obtained from news sources here at home.

By WILLIAM HILLMAN

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT, in a recent address, declared that the "danger to world peace lies not in the world population, but in the political leaders of the population."

Political leaders, he might have added, are often precipitated into dangerous commitments BY THE INDISCRETIONS OF INEPT OR DANGEROUS REPRESENTATIVES.

Diplomacy is the business of the few. But it is not the prerogative of these few to commit the United States to any action or policy which is not sanctioned by those empowered to decide the fundamental foreign policy of the country.

Nor is diplomacy a game for amateurs to throw out unauthorized suggestions and proposals without fullest consideration of the consequences.

European eyes have scrutinized carefully every proposal and suggestion made by the United States during the last decade and a half—with one thought and one purpose only:

They have sought to measure to what extent AMERICAN RESOURCES could be used to back up the machinery of the League of Nations, which is based on the idea of sanctions and coercion.

They have sought to involve the United States—by one formula or another—in the concept and framework of the League, which the United States Senate rejected.

Allied statesmen are not entirely satisfied with the speed of this trend back, for the pace seems too slow.

But evidence, conveyed to them by agents of the administration and through utterances of the administration, convince them that THE TREND OF THE UNITED STATES IS DEFINITELY BACK TO GENEVA.

The declaration of Mr. Norman Davis that the United States is prepared under a disarmament agreement to bind itself in a consultative pact with Europe, to agree to supervision of arms, and abandon neutrality and freedom of the seas, is regarded by leading European statesmen as the surrender by the United States of the "traditional rights of neutrals to which the United States has been so stubbornly attached."

It means economic and financial sanctions, including blockade and embargo, will be unhampered by the claim of "freedom of the seas."

One Allied statesman declared to me that the "Democratic administration in fact proposed to change the traditional American attitude toward the whole question of neutrality."

And Ambassador Bingham has sought to emphasize this impression. Addressing the Pilgrim's Society at a Memorial Day dinner in London last year, and referring to the statement made by Mr. Davis at Geneva, he declared:

"That marked the definite departure from certain principles maintained by the United States since the nation was founded."

Commenting upon Europe's view that the President is not empowered to commit the United States in any policy without the assent of Congress, the American ambassador to the Court of St. James said:

"It is necessary to realize President Roosevelt has loyal

CITY CITES PENALTY POWER

One-Man Street Car Levy Definitely Blocked

If public utilities fail to pay promptly the proposed tax on meters, the city can add penalties and interest, according to a statement by City Solicitor Cornelius D. Scully to Council.

If the utilities take the city to court and the city gets a favorable decision, the entire amount is collectible within 60 days from the decision, Scully said yesterday.

COUNCIL TO ACT

From all indications, Council is ready to act favorably on the meter tax next week and let the utilities take it to court if they wish. There is a possibility that the vote may be unanimous.

Mayor McNair has expressed opposition and hinted at a veto, but under the circumstances this would have little effect aside from putting the Mayor on record.

The one-man street car tax was definitely blocked yesterday by Scully, who told Council the city has a signed agreement with the Pittsburgh Railways Company exempting cars from taxation. This is a part of the contract creating the Traction Conference Board.

Scully also dashed any hopes Council might have had of getting immediate revenue from the meter tax. He said:

"I am quite well satisfied after what we heard here (from

PLEDGE KIDNAP DEAL SECRECY

ST. PAUL, Jan. 27. — (AP.) — All avenues of communication were kept open today to smooth the way for contact between the kidnapers of Edward G. Bremer, and his kin, from whom the abductors have demanded $200,000 for his release.

Missing 10 days, the 37-year-old president and owner of the Commercial State Bank last communicated with the family four days or more ago and then through the medium of a kidnap gang's missive.

Eager to hear the final word from the gang—the rendezvous and time of payment for the ransom—the family has promised to keep secret arrangements with the captors.

Rogers Wants To Meet McNair

Will Rogers arrived in Pittsburgh late yesterday with a yen for a sandwich and a glass of milk —and left with a burning desire to eat an apple with Mayor McNair and learn about the single tax.

Making a stop at the Municipal Airport on a coast-to-coast flight to Washington, the cowboy-humorist heard about Pittsburgh's Mayor, the apples and the tax theory and commented:

"It sounds good. I'd like to meet him. That tax idea might be all right. If I learned about it maybe I could be a Mayor again—they threw me out in Hollywood when the better element got in, y' know. But he's not going to take 20 years to tell me about it."

The humorist will return to Hollywood within two weeks, stopping en route, if time permits, to chat with Pittsburgh's Mayor.

MAN ENDS LIFE ON HONEYMOON

MT. HOLLY, N. J., Jan. 27.—(AP.)—Millard F. Edouard, 45, of Los Angeles, Cal., on his honeymoon trip to New York, was found shot to death in his automobile about a mile from Florence early today. His bride told police he had shot himself in a fit of despondency.

State police officers said they learned from Mrs. Edna Mae Edouard, 38, that the trip, in addition to being a honeymoon, was to confer on her the power of attorney for $110,000 which Edouard was said to have in a New York bank.

In his pocket was a will bequeathing to a former wife a ranch he owned in Phoenix, Ariz., the police say. They also reported his bride formerly was the wife of a prominent Los Angeles physician. She told police:

"Before I knew what was happening, he pulled out a .25-caliber automatic pistol and shot himself through the temple. I jumped out of the car and summoned aid."

CABINET QUITS IN FRANCE

PARIS, Jan. 27.—(AP.)—Premier Camille Chautemps and his cabinet resigned today.

The resignation followed a series of demonstrations against the government as a result of the recent collapse of the Bayonne munipal pawnshop and a resultant "mud bath" for government officials in the Chamber of Deputies.

Hergesheimer Leaving U. S., Denies Threat

International News Service.

PHILADELPHIA, Jan. 27.—Joseph Hergesheimer, author of many fantastic tales, was himself the subject of a choice story today.

Letters demanding money on penalty of abduction, guards armed with shotguns, detectives slinking about, mysterious whisperings—these were but some of the elements of the narrative in which the famed writer figured.

But Hergesheimer was the subject, not the author of this tale which stirred the imaginations of his fellow townsfolk in suburban West Chester, where the author lives.

The story that Hergesheimer, outstanding among America's romantic realists, was under threat of kidnaping or bodily harm; the report that his home was being guarded by Department of Justice agents, bearing shotguns; — this was all fiction to Hergesheimer. He exclaimed:

"I haven't any money. It wouldn't do any gang a bit of good to kidnap me for ransom."

Preparing to embark on a trip to Bermuda today, the noted author professed complete ignorance of the rumor that he had received a letter, threatening abduction if money is not paid, two weeks ago.

Kaiser 75, Celebrates; Nazis Halt Berlin Fete

DOORN, Jan. 27.—(AP.)—Wilhelm Hohenzollern, the former kaiser of the imperial German empire, was smiling and cordial this morning on the seventy-fifth anniversary of his birth.

He arose and accepted the congratulations of his relatives and the members of his household assembled in the big hall of Doorn House.

Apparently he was recovered from his recent attack of rheumatism. He attended a special religious service which was followed by a lunch.

Former Crown Prince Friedrich Wilhelm and the former kaiser's only surviving sister, the Duchess of Hesse, were among the celebrants.

Although the celebration was kept almost entirely a family affair, the village was in a state of high excitement. Villagers were tendered gifts of food and clothing.

But in Berlin, according to word reaching here, a ball organized by army officers in the former emperor's honor was broken up by Nazi Brown Shirts.

LACK OF COAL CAUSES RELIEF WORKERS' WALKOUT

MILLS BLAMES NEW METHOD OF BUYING

No Water, Lighting Poor, 60 From Hill Say

A routine change in the Allegheny County Emergency Association's method of purchasing coal was blamed today by its director, George P. Mills, for the walkout of 60 relief workers on the grounds that the association had failed to provide their branch office at Locust and Van Braam streets with coal.

The workers are back at work today, the coal bin having been replenished with six tons of coal while the employes were at Mills' offices voicing their indignation.

The workers did not limit their complaint to the lack of coal, which they said caused their fingers to become so numb that the use of typewriters was impossible. They also told Mills there was no drinking water in the building, that the lighting was poor and that there were no towels, it was reported.

Asked if working conditions in branch offices were as bad as the group pictured them, Mills replied:

"About 20 branch offices have been established in the city and county recently, and in most of these the employes are working under adverse conditions. While the association furnishes the light and heat for its branches, we expect the localities in which they are located to provide other maintenance.

"The matter is not settled and a formal solution will have to be worked out."

Mills said he told the workers that the lack of coal in their branch was due to a change in the method of buying coal. The purchase of coal, he said, was changed from one account to another, and, he said, the delay was occasioned in the process of changing accounts.

ISABELLA MINE STILL IDLE

BROWNSVILLE, Pa., Jan. 27.—The strike of Weirton miners at Isabella continued today with another meeting of the men to discuss peace terms. A conference with the mine management is scheduled for Monday.

The strikers remain adamant in their demands for the removal of Supt. D. A. Bloyer, despite the company's concessions in numerous other instances. Among the concessions made by the company was removal of a mine foreman and deputy sheriffs and rehiring of a number of men against whom discrimination was alleged.

Monday's meeting will be in the form of another grievance committee session with General Manager C. G. Leichliter. James F. Dewey, special representative of the National Labor Board, returned to Washington yesterday following action of the men in refusing to return to work.

SINKING FUND PLAN DEFENDED

Mrs. R. Templeton Smith and M. C. Conick, auditor, appeared before Council yesterday to explain some budget recommendations they made in a report given to Council by Mayor McNair.

Conick defended the plan to put $750,000 into the sinking fund from various unused portions of bond issues. Controller James P. Kerr questioned its legality and City Solicitor Cornelius D. Scully said it was only "partly feasible."

Among the funds Conick would turn back is a $200,000 portion of a peoples' bond issue for streets voted in 1928. Conick said he thought part of the street bond issue could be cancelled because of reduced construction costs.

Trades Council Backs Home Tax Exemption

The Pittsburgh Building Trades Council is in favor of the ordinance introduced by Councilman John J. Kane to exempt for five years $5,000 of the value of new homes built between April 1 and October 1, according to Leo A. Green, secretary. Kane introduced the ordinance at the request of Mayor McNair.

BAN ON STRIKE VIOLENCE

Judge Thomas M. Marshall has fixed January 31 for the hearing of an equity suit by the Ward Baking Company against several unions which have declared a strike against its plant, to restrain them from acts of violence and from interfering with business.

Judge Marshall yesterday issued an order restraining Local Union No. 12, of the Bakery and Confectionery Union, and Local Union 485, of the Bakery Wagon Drivers, Chauffeurs and Helpers, from committing acts of violence, pending the hearing.

The National Labor Board, according to an Associated Press dispatch from Washington, formally condemned the strike as a violation by the bakery employers of a promise to submit grievances to the Pittsburgh Regional Labor Board for settlement and not to call strikes.

It was erroneously reported yesterday that Mayor McNair, while a witness at the injunction hearing, had accused the Ward company of employing "thugs" as guards. The Mayor's testimony, referring to policing activities as a result of the strike was:

"I was there a few days ago and found a large number of policemen there who objected to the thugs there, though they were called deputy sheriffs, but were only there to make trouble."

Japs' Naval Parity Aims Confirmed

TOKIO, Jan. 27. — (INS.)—Admiral Mineo Osumi, minister of the navy, today confirmed previous intimations Japan will demand naval parity at the 1935 naval conference scheduled to be held in Washington.

Answering interpellators in the diet, Osumi declared Japan had until the end of 1934 to formally notify signatories of the previous Washington treaty of any intention to nullify its terms in future negotiations.

BANK OPPOSES GIVING NAMES

The Union Trust Company, of Pittsburgh, through counsel, yesterday at a hearing before Federal Judge Nelson McVicar, opposed the petition of the government asking that the trust company be directed to furnish names and addresses of widows and others who are beneficiaries of trust funds created by will, with taxable incomes for 1931 and 1932, in which the company is trustee.

Attorney Maynard Teall, for the trust company, referred to the government's request as a "fishing expedition." He contended the Bureau of Internal Revenue has the information sought in its own files.

Attorney John A. McCann, representative in Pittsburgh of general counsel of the Bureau of Internal Revenue, said:

"It would only take the company about three minutes to furnish the information."

Attorney Teall replied:

M'NAIR GIVEN GIDEON BIBLE

The embarrassment which ensued when City Hall was unable to produce a Bible for the purpose of swearing in a Mayor, need not be repeated.

The Society of Gideons today presented Mayor McNair with a copy of the Scriptures and the later said he would keep it on his desk.

When His Honor was inducted into office, a copy of the Bible was not available in the City County Building with the result that a hurry call was sent out and a Gideon Bible obtained.

The presentation was made by L. J. Ward, president of the Pittsburgh Camp of Gideons and L. McNair Smith, (no relation of the Mayor), vice president.

Indict Iowa Official Over Public Works

DES MOINES, Ia., Jan. 27.—(AP.) — A Federal indictment charging conspiracy to defraud the government stood today against Lieut. Gov. Nelson G. Kraschel, of Iowa and Carleton D. Beh, a Des Moines investment broker. A federal grand jury returned the indictment today after a week's investigation of the Iowa Public Works Administration.

It is alleged the Lieutenant Governor and Beh conspired to persuade political subdivisions not to request federal loans for public works, urging county and city officials to finance construction through Beh's investment house.

JAPAN'S ENVOY CALLS ON DUCE

ROME, Jan. 27.—(AP.)—Japanese Ambassador Hajame Matsushima, acting on instructions from Tokio, called on Premier Mussolini last night an asked for an explanation of a recent article by Il Duce on the Far East, it was learned today.

Japanese resentment was aroused by the article, called "The Far East," in which Mussolini made several pointed references to Japan.

The visit could not be called a formal protest, it was said at the Japanese embassy, but the Ambassador was instructed to say that the article had created a "painful impression" with the Japanese government.

The Ambassador said Mussolini had explained to the former's satisfaction that he had not intended directing the article against Japan.

70 Per Cent of Cars Inspected Defective

HARRISBURG, Jan. 27.—(AP.)—More than 70 per cent of the automobiles inspected in the current compulsory inspection period, were defective, the Department of Revenue said today.

The reports show 63,755 vehicles have been inspected in the three weeks, and 44,691 of that number required mechanical adjustments or repairs.

the utility heads) that we will not get this tax in time to pay this year's deficit. The tax will accrue, of course."

Later he added that he did not believe any cash will be paid into the city out of the meter tax before June 1, 1935.

APPEALS COURT

Scully explained that the highest court to which an appeal might be taken on that kind of case is the United States Circuit Court of Appeals.

Kane asked:

"Wouldn't it be possible for the city to collect these taxes pending a decision of the court, the same as the utilities do with their bills?"

Scully replied:

"I don't think so."

The decision of the court could not be altered by the Public Service Commission, but the utilities might attempt to pass on the new tax to the consumers, in which event rate cases before the commission would probably result.

PROPERTY TAX

The possibility of taxing certain real estate owned by utilities was discussed, but as there are numerous decisions upholding utility real estate exemptions, action is unlikely.

On motion of Robert Garland, Scully has been asked for an opinion on whether the exempt utility real estate is taxable and whether such a stand could be levied this year.

Mayor McNair, however, wants to bill the utilities for taxes on their land, whether exempt or otherwise. He said the bills will be sent out immediately if the City Controller will agree.

McNair has worked out the following strategy. He explained:

"Suppose the Controller says, 'No, I won't send out the bills,' then I'll have to get Council to send the billing duty back to the Treasurer. Then I can say, 'Here, sign these or I'll drop you.'"

U. S. ARMY MEN TO RULE OVER CWA JOBS

Hopkins' Move Seen As Blow at Graft And Politics

WASHINGTON, Jan. 27.—(AP.)—Army engineers were lined up today to take over partial direction of the embattled Civil Works program following an administration decision to answer protests with a touch of military discipline.

Receiving more objections and a few resignations even as he acted, Administrator Harry L. Hopkins nevertheless went ahead with his proposal to install military engineers in several key cities.

Asked if the move was taken because of charges of graft and political favoritism that have been received from 45 states, Hopkins replied this was not the complete basis for the action.

He added to newsmen, however, that it would be a "fair assumption" that Army men would be placed at some points "where there is an investigation."

ILLINOIS CHIEFS QUIT

Immediately there were repercussions. Following disclosure that Lieut. Col. Dan R. Sultan, Chicago district engineer, would take charge in Cook County, Ill., there came a blanket resignation from civilian directors of state and county civil works.

Another trouble spot centered in Los Angeles. Maj. Donald Connally, another Army engineer, was placed in charge of the CWA operations in Los Angeles County. Three indictments already have been returned there, and an investigation of alleged political interference is in progress.

Hopkins expected to complete his Army lineup by Monday. He explained that some cities had no one now directly in charge, and that some of the military men would be named to those places.

Federal Probe of CWA Program Here Predicted

A federal probe of conditions in the Allegheny County CWA next week was predicted today when it was learned that Pennsylvania CWA investigators had completed checking complaints made here.

Union workers, job seekers and others are to be interviewed, it is reported, by Robert E. Kelsoe, special CWA field investigator from Washington, sent here from the office of Federal Administrator Harry L. Hopkins. In addition, official CWA records in the offices of County Administrator James L. Stuart and Director R. W. Gibbs, of the Federal-State Employment Bureau, will be scrutinized.

Cessation of Work Brings North Braddock Clash

More than 200 CWA workers in North Braddock, roused by rumors that the Borough Council intended to halt their CWA projects, jammed the borough hall to protest at a special Council meeting last night.

Police guarded the building while councilmen hurled charges of "petty politics" at each other and graver charges of mismanagement at Pittsburgh CWA office heads.

Work has been proceeding on only two of the eight jobs approved in the North Braddock application. Frost yesterday halted the chief of the two—repaving of Sedon avenue, according to George F. Sieffers, borough engineer. Men employed on it jumped to the conclusion that the Council had ordered a stop, he said.

A ruling yesterday by Council President John W. Hanna that no other CWA project could be started until the Sedon avenue job was finished added to the confusion.

The Council passed two resolutions, one to permit taxpayers to work off their delinquent taxes by working on the streets and one to allow CWA work to proceed on other streets besides Sedon avenue. Sieffers was directed to put his men back to work today.

However, as the two hundred millions increase to four hundred millions, and the four hundred millions to eight hundred millions a year, it may be more difficult.

POWERFUL OLD Martin Luther, who started in Germany a split that has last ever since, would be interested to see his own German Lutheran Church now in danger of disruption, 1,000 pastors siding with Bishop Mueller, selected by the Nazis to head an "all-German" church.

The original plan for only one church in Germany, one patriotism, one belief, one Aryan or Nordic strain of blood, and the devil take the rest, has failed, as regards religion.

The Roman Catholic Church, which has outlived many Hitlers, including Rienzi and others, declines to merge or be merged, preferring to deal with history over long periods, not from one hour to the next.

IN A CHICAGO courtroom, John Factor, kidnaped, held for ransom, released when his friends paid, stepped down from the witness stand three times to point out, his hand shaking with fear, three of the men that kidnaped him, Roger Touhy, Gustaves "Gloomy Gus" Schaefer and Albert "Polly Nose" Kator.

While they held him, the men threatened to blow out his brains, "cut off an ear and send it to your wife as a souvenir." Factor swore that Touhy said to him:

"We don't want the 'G' in on this. We can fix the police, but we don't want anything to do with the 'G.'"

By "G" the kidnapers meant the national government. If the "G" had not entered the case it is probable that the kidnapers, with their money, might still be free.

Fortunately, President Roosevelt has ordered "G" to interest itself in all kidnapings. It will be interesting to see what "Illinois justice" does about the kidnapers, positively identified in open court by their terrified victim.

Weather Conditions.

Pressure is relatively high over a belt extending from the East Gulf states northwestward to Washington and Oregon, while low pressure occupies the northern sattes and Canada, with the principal centers over Manitoba and Eastern Ontario. A center of low pressure appears south of Texas, and is causing cloudiness and showers in Eastern Texas and as far east as New Orleans. The northern centers are producing cloudy weather over the Atlantic Coast states and the lake region, with light precipitation at various scattered places. It is slightly cooler than yesterday morning along the South Atlantic coast, and there was a decided drop in temperature in Northern Alberta and Saskatchewan. Elsewhere temperature changes were towards warmer, with a rather marked rise in the Ohio Valley states, the lake region and over the northern and central plains. There is no cold weather indicated for this section before Monday afternoon or night.

River Conditions.

There was a further slight rise in the Monongahela River, but the Allegheny is now falling and the Ohio is about stationary. Stage at Franklin is 3.4 feet; Lock No. 16, 10.2, and No. 12, 9.7. The dams are up. The rivers will change but little feat, as administration leaders have demonstrated their power to enact the measure in the form desired by the President. All efforts to modify his requested powers were defeated by such overwhelming majorities that the opposition collapsed although retaining its vocal effort.

BANKERS FORCE U. S. MONEY TRUCE

SENATE UNDER GAG RULE

The Senate met under a gag rule which limits debate at 4 p. m. A vote will be taken on the silver issue before that time.

Final enactment of the bill was postponed until next week, when the House adjourned until Monday. Under parliamentary procedure, all Senate amendments must be approved by the House before the bill is finally enacted into law. It probably cannot be sent to the White House for the President's signature before next Tuesday.

The silverites in the Senate rallied behind an amendment, proposed by Senator Wheeler (Dem.), of Montana, to authorize the governmental purchase of 1,000,000,000 ounces of silver. Purchase would be suspended whenever the price of pure silver reached a ratio of 16 to 1 against the price of pure gold.

All silver purchased would be used as the basis for issuing paper money in the form of silver certificates.

Senator Robinson, the Democratic floor leader, declared:

"We have the silver amendment defeated. We will pass the bill late today."

In the face of this outcome, the silverites were making a desperate fight. They insisted the gold devaluation program would fail to increase commodity prices as President Roosevelt promised in recent speeches.

They demanded adoption of the silver purchasing program as a means of increasing America's foreign trade. They urged it, too, as a means of increasing commodity prices, through the proposed increase in the amount of money circulated.

BIMETALISM OPPOSED

Administration opposition fought it on the ground the President did not desire any silver legislation in the bill. This proved a conclusive argument, although conservatives on both sides of the aisle opposed it because it would create bimetalism in this country.

The bill as now amended would do three things:

First—it would authorize the President to seize all gold held by Federal Reserve banks and pay for it at present gold values with paper money in the form of gold certificates, which could be redeemed later at the devaluated value.

Second—It would empower the President to devaluate the gold dollar to a point between 50 and 60 cents of the present dollar.

Third—It would create a $2,000,000,000 fund to be used by the Secretary of the Treasury, upon the President's approval, in stabilizing the exchange value of the dollar. The portion of the fund not needed for this purpose could be used for investments in government securities, a program tending at any time to stabilize the market for government bonds.

OPPOSITION BOGS DOWN

Opposition to the bill bogged down after two straight defeats. The first defeat came when the Senate voted, 36 to 54, against creating a five-man board to operate the fund. The second came on a 32-to-50 vote against restricting the use of the fund to a currency war. After that, the administration had its way without record votes.

The measure faced final passage with the opposition denouncing it in bitter terms. Senator Hastings (Rep.), of Delaware, called it "legalized robbery" because it ordered the seizure of bank gold.

Senator Carter Glass (Dem.), of Virginia, assailed it as creating a "one-man central bank" in the person of the Secretary of the Treasury, while literally wiping out the Federal Reserve system. Senator Reed (Rep.), of Pennsylvania, charged it would impose a 40 per cent slash on all fixed incomes.

The administration reply was that the bill was needed to carry out the President's program for increasing commodity prices. Its advocates asserted it would lead to better times and relief of agriculture.

Slot Machine Suspect's Release Urged by McNair

Magistrate J. W. McGowan was to hear the case of Gus George of 1807 Westmont street, accused of participation in a huge slot-machine ring, with Mayor McNair's suggestion that he release George.

McNair's suggestion is contrary to that of the City Law Department and of Police Superintendent Ben R. Marshall, it was learned.

McGowan yesterday said:

McNair told him:

"Well, let him go; you make the decision. You have the set-up here of the District Attorney; we're not the prosecutor, you're not the prosecutor—you're a magistrate."

In arresting George, police said they seized 87 slot machines in the house. Marshall, meanwhile, has obtained the service of two county detectives to investigate the matter.

The slot machine ring, so-so-called by police, was described by Alfred Block, of 3749 Beechwood boulevard, who said he was one of the organizers of the Western Pennsylvania Operators' Association which sponsored the meeting in the Fort Pitt Hotel, January 16.

Block declared the meeting was "open to all," but the postcard specifically stated:

"Please do not bring any outsider as they will not be admitted."

The association, Block declared, is interested only in the operation of "legitimate" machines such as the "pin table type" which are for amusement only. The group, he said, is not interested in the gambling type of slot machine.

Chamber Flays Tugwell Bill as Censorship

WASHINGTON, Jan. 27.—(AP.)—The United States Chamber of Commerce today assailed as "an attempt at inexcusable intrusion into private business" proposals to place what it called government censorship upon food and drug advertising.

The broadside was fired in connection with the Copeland-Tugwell food and drug measure, on which hearings already have been completed. Henry I. Harriman, president of the Chamber, sent the statement to the Senate Commerce Committee.

The Chamber conceded there should be legislation "requiring the same truthfulness in advertising, with respect to foods, drugs and cosmetics, as in the labeling of articles to which federal labeling laws apply."

But censorship in any form should be opposed, it added.

Recommending a set of principles for consideration in enacting any new food and drug legislation, the Chamber urged caution in granting discretionary powers to administrative agencies and suggested punitive features relate directly to protection needed in the public interest.

It counseled that industry itself "continue its progress in arriving at standards of quality for article to which such standards can properly be applied."

CHEAP RANSOM BOOMS KIDNAPING, U. S. AGENT SAYS

VICTIMS KEEP SILENT, PAY LOW RATES

Many Fail to Report Crimes, Prober Tells Meetings Here

More than 20 unreported kidnapings have occurred throughout the nation in the past eight weeks, it was declared here today by C. Ray Hansen, of Chicago, former chief investigator for the Loesch Crime Commission and at present a special investigator for the federal government.

The "snatch racket" has resortd to a new and, according to Hansen, a more successful plan of operation.

URGES DEFIANCE

The kidnapers have lowered the ante, he says, and the victim pays and keeps silent. Instead of the fantastic and unreasonable demand of $100,000, according to the government investigator, the racketeer is demanding anywhere from $1,000 to $5,000 and getting it.

The "snatch artist" reasons, Hansen explains, that by lowering the ransom, families of victims will be more co-operative and fewer cases will be reported to the authorities. Thus, the perpetrator can be more certain of immunity, the investigator declared.

Complete refusal to accede to the demands of kidnapers, despite the worry and misery involved, is the best medicine for the situation, Hansen declared, pointing out that a gangster is very unlikely to kill his victim due to the fact that the remuneration involved does not warrant the "rap." Should the victim's family ignore all demands of kidnapers, the gangster in all probability will release his prisoner and seek another, the investigator said.

CRIME, POLITICS MIXED

Hansen declared that "crime and politics are mixed without a doubt," and that in local elections gangsters' candidates "fail only when there is an overwhelming vote by the people." Hansen advised immediate and direct communication with the Bureau of Investigation of the Department of Justice in kidnap cases. He said:

"In the Bremer case they brought in the local authorities first. That's why they're failing. The same thing happened in the Lindbergh kidnaping."

He termed the Lindbergh case a "bungle" for that reason, called reformers "people who assume an air of respectability, are convinced things ought to be done but never do them."

He spoke last night under the auspices of the Mulert Lectureship Foundation at the Mt. Lebanon United Presbyterian Church on "Will the Crime Drive Win?" He also addressed the League of Women Voters at Carnegie Music Hall yesterday on "Government by Gangland."

EIGHT INJURED IN AUTO CRASH

Eight persons were injured last night when two autos crashed at Frankstown avenue and Washington boulevard, according to a police report. Both drivers, Charles Tierno, 34, of Dersam street, and Harry Brose, 30, of 7403 Finance street, were injured, police said. They were charged with reckless driving.

The others injured, all passengers in Brose's car, which turned over in the crash, are Mrs. Clara Guzzo, 7409 Finance street; her daughter, Jennie, 5; Ralph and Mrs. Anna Buffone, 1018 Third avenue, New Kensington; Mrs. Mary Fisher, of 7403 Finance street, and John Fisher, 8, of the same address.

GUARD FACTOR FROM GANG

International News Service.

CHICAGO, Jan. 27.—John "Jake the Barber" Factor returned under heavy guard to Criminal Court today for further cross-examination by the attorneys whose clients, the Touhy gangsters, he dramatically branded as his kidnapers.

The wealthy stock promoter, who has pointed out Roger Touhy, asserted gang leader, Albert Kator and Gus Schaefer as three members of the gang that "snatched him for $70,000 ransom, was ready to take the stand today, with Defense Attorney William Stewart as the inquisitor.

Over the objections of the prosecution Stewart brought before the jury the fact that the state's star witness is to be returned shortly to England to stand trial on charges of swindling investors of $7,000,000.

Fifteen squads of policemen guarded the courtroom of Judge Michael Feinberg to prevent gangland from carrying out its threat of death against Factor as he testified.

JEAN HARLOW ESTATE SUED

LOS ANGELES, Jan. 27.—(AP.)—The ashes of the tragic case of Paul Bern were stirred again today by a suit seeking half of his $61,000 estate from his widow, Jean Harlow, actress.

Action was brought by Herman A. Koch, Sacramento public administrator, on behalf of the estate of Dorothy Millette Bern, who committed suicide shortly after he took his life in September, 1932. The woman was described as the marital companion of Bern, in fact, for many years.

Miss Harlow's attorney, M. B. Silberberg, said the action would be contested.

Mill Worker, 108, Dies in Glassport

Frank Jonkolski, who claimed he was 108 years old, died yesterday at the home of a daughter in Glassport. He had said he was 96 years old when he quit work in McKeesport steel mills after coming to America from Germany at the age of 66. He said he was born in 1826, 18 miles from Berlin. He lived in Glassport with his daughter, Mrs. Walter Pomocki, of 630 Delaware avenue.

DILLINGER GANG MAPS LEGAL BATTLE

Will Fight Return to Ohio on Charge Of Murder

TUCSON, Ariz., Jan. 27.—(AP.)—Legal technicalities have replaced guns in the fight for freedom of John Dillinger, mid-western desperado, and three captured henchmen.

They have shot their way out of more formidable prisons, but they relied today on the strategy of Attorney John L. Van Buskirk to get them out of the county jail here, where they have been under heavy guard since their unexpected capture Thursday.

Buskirk planned to seek writs of habeas corpus when bonds were fixed at $100,000 or more for each of the quartet. He laid further plans to resist extradition proceedings to Indiana and Ohio where the mobsters are wanted for murder prosecutions, and possibly other mid-western states which they terrorized.

BAIL $100,000

Bail for Dillinger and Charles Makley, known as the "hardest guy" of the gang, was fixed at $100,000 each as fugitives from justice. Harry Pierpont, self-spoken "trigger man" and Russell Clark, are charged with resisting officers. They are held in $105,000 bail each.

Gov. George White, of Ohio, asked Indiana authorities to agree to the return of Makley, Pierpont and Clark to the former state where they are accused of murdering Sheriff Jess Sarber, at Lima. The four also face charges of murder at East Chicago, Ind., and are accused of a string of bank robberies in the two states in which an estimated $250,000 was taken.

Clarence Houston, Pima County attorney here, said Indiana authorities had agreed to the return of the outlaws to Ohio, where capital punishment is a murder penalty.

INDICTED FOR MURDER

At Indianapolis, Al G. Feeney, Indiana state director of public safety, said he believed the three gang lieutenants should be turned over to Ohio authorities. Dillinger, he said, should be brought to Indiana to face an indictment returned yesterday by the Lake County grand jury at Gary, charging the outlaw leader with murdering Police Detective Patrick O'Malley at East Chicago.

Feeney suggested the four could be returned to Indiana without extradition proceedings, as Pierpoint, Makley and Clark are escaped convicts and Dillinger a parole violator.

Mary Kinder, one of the three women arrested in the gangster roundup, was indicted by the Marion County (Ind.) grand jury on a charge of aiding Pierpont to escape after he and Makley and Clark broke from the state prison with seven other convicts last September. She was put under $100,000 bail as a fugitive.

Anna Martin and Opal Long, the other women, were held under $500 bail each as material witnesses.

There's No More Gold Now in Those Republican Hills

By ARTHUR (BUGS) BAER

Did the Republicans cop the Democratic platform in Chicago? Are the Democrats stealing the Republican money today?

More than a long time ago we remember that the McKinley campaign badge was a gold bug.

Today the Democrats are the gold bugs.

That's a strange switch. Seems that the gears and spare parts of the two big parties are interchangeable.

The Republicans have themselves to blame for making the opposition gold conscious. While the Grand Old party was talking about it, the Democrats went out and collected it all.

WAITERS QUIT, GUESTS SERVE THEMSELVES

Thomas Sees Test of NRA in New York Hotel Strike

NEW YORK, Jan. 27.—(AP.)—A strike of waiters and kitchen help had spread through most of New York's hotels today.

Called by the Amalgamated Hotel and Restaurant Workers' Union, which claims a membership of 30,000, the strike was seen as "a test of the NRA" by Norman Thomas, Socialist leader. He addressed a mass meeting last night.

The number of workers out was hard to determine. The union refused to make an estimate. A survey compiled from statements of hotel managements last night showed 663 out.

The answer of most of the hotels to demands of the union, which set a deadline of 5 p. m. for their acceptance, was to recruit reserve staffs. In other hostelries room captains and other workers served food prepared by reduced kitchen forces.

Guests at the Park Central were ready for the last course when the waiters walked out and a number went to the kitchen and obtained their own dessert.

Parades and mass meetings were held by the strikers last night, the largest demonstration being at the Waldorf-Astoria. There a peaceful picket line large enough to tie up sidewalk traffic for about an hour assembled.

The union, which is not associated with the American Federation of Labor, demands a 40-hour week, a $20 wage scale and improved working conditions. From the Waldorf it demands reinstatement of a chef who it claims was discharged because of union activities.

BARCLAY DEATH NEWS FOR BRIDE

International News Service.

GREENSBURG, Pa., Jan. 27.—A grieved family, mourning the death of a son from a bullet wound, was confronted with the task of conveying the news to his bride of a few months today.

While authorities investigated the circumstances surrounding the death of Thomas Barclay III, 30, found wounded in the bedroom of his apartment, his parents moved to notify Barclay's wife, who is in a Pittsburgh hospital.

Until several weeks ago, Barclay had been employed in the Barclay - Westmoreland Trust Company, of which his uncle, John Barclay, is president and his father is an official. He is alleged to have beaten up a watchman who refused him admittance to the bank earlier in the week.

The dead man married Miss Flora, Wike, of Brevard, N. C., last June.

FINALE TONIGHT AT AUTO SHOW

Pittsburgh's 1934 automobile show, termed by exhibitors and manufacturers of automobiles the greatest of its kind ever held in the city, will end in Motor Square Garden tonight.

W. N. Owings, secretary-manager of the Pittsburgh Automobile Dealers' Association, sponsor of the show, said visitors have shown a keen interest in the revolutionary changes incorporated in the 1934 models.

Better business conditions and good weather, coupled with reduced admission, were among the factors contributing to record-breaking attendances, he added. Also, he said, the fact that many of the new models exhibited at the show have not yet appeared on the streets has attracted hundreds to the Garden.

Sales at the show have come up fully to expectations, Owings said.

GIRL'S SCREAMS ROUT INTRUDER

A Negro, clad in chauffeur's attire, who was frightened away by the screams of Regina Monahan when he entered her apartment, 271 North Craig street, last night, is being sought by police today, according to a report.

Miss Monahan said the man entered her apartment through an unlocked door and attempted to put his hand over her mouth when she screamed. Fearing her screams would attract other residents of the apartment, he fled, Miss Monahan told police.

Police Officer Held On Charges of Girl

South Side Police Lieut. Albert Florig was held for court last night on charges of assault and battery made by a waitress who said he pushed her aside roughly while he was raiding a club at 420 Brownsville road.

Cronkhite Calls Lack Of Preparedness Crime

General, Wife Laud Lesson of War Pictures

Victory is the thing generals fight for on the battlefield; in peace time it is for preparedness, and no greater lesson in preparedness could be given than the uncensored war pictures appearing in the Sunday Sun-Telegraph, according to Maj. Gen. Adelbert Cronkhite.

Gen. Cronkhite, retired, lives at 3234 Perrysville avenue with his wife, Mrs. Gertrude Cronkhite. During the World War both saw service. He was commander of the 80th Division, A. E. F., in which thousands of Pittsburgh men served. His wife was active in war work and later served as vice chairman of the Allegheny County Veterans' Hospital Association.

Today as they sat in their home, looking at the war pictures which will appear in the Sun-Telegraph tomorrow, they agreed that the pictures carried a great lesson in preparedness. The war time Commander said:

"The reason there are so many horrors and dead people in them is that our men were not trained and we were not prepared.

"It is criminal not to be prepared! I think the Sun-Telegraph is doing the country a great service if it impresses that fact on the minds of the people, as I trust these pictures will."

Mrs. Cronkhite added:

"If they educate the people for proper preparedness, then I say they are most wonderful.

"The last war took the cream of America's youth, and slaughtered and maimed many of them. If you go into the Veterans' Hospital at Aspinwall and see the young men lying on their backs who will never get well, you will see that we should avoid war by being prepared."

ROCKWELL KENT ART ON VIEW

By PENELOPE REDD

The Gillespie Galleries have on view through January 31, an informal exhibtion of wood engravings, lithographs, the Greenland painting shown at the last Carnegie International, and a group of books illustrated by Rockwell Kent.

The wood engravings include many of the sea such as "The Lookout," "The Bowsprit," "Diver," "Hail and Farewell," "Sea and Sky," and "Homeport."

Miss Redd

In these Kent defines man's place in space with breath-taking power. The "Prometheus" and "Child and Star" also project man's defiance of the firmament. In ideas, draughtsmanship, and technic, Rockwell Kent has probably never been excelled in this medium.

In the lithographs done in Greenland, Kent indulges in character studies of people. "Dirty Debora'' and "Mala" approach caricature in their pointing-up of natural grotesquerie. "Sophia," a portrait of a young Eskimo woman, brings out the beauty of a race where our average eyes would find but strangeness.

Hotel Raided, 3 Men, 2 Women Arrested

Joseph Kobosky, 28, alleged proprietor of the New Florence Hotel, 212 Smithfield street, two women and two men were arrested when police raided the hotel shortly before midnight, according to police. Kobosky was charged with keeping a disorderly house and the others with visiting a disorderly house.

MAYOR TELLS HOW TO FOIL BLUE LAW

Old Legislative Clock Trick Suggested By M'Closkey

JOHNSTOWN, Pa., Jan. 27.—(AP.)—The old legislative trick of turning the clock back is put forth by Mayor Eddie McCloskey as one way for Johnstown motion picture theater to get around the ban on Sunday movies.

He urges theater owners to stop their clocks Saturday night before midnight and keep the hands there. That, in effect, he says, will mean that the Sunday movies will be shown on Saturday.

The fighting Mayor worked out his ingenious plan yesterday as the newest step in the blue law battle he has been waging with City Council. He said:

"The Pennsylvania Legislature stopped the clock for three days once and I don't see why the theaters can't do the same."

Some weeks ago the Mayor sanctioned Sunday movies, the profits to go to charity. Council objected, so McCloskey last Sunday ordered the Blue Law lid down on all business activities.

Twenty-four merchants cited for keeping their business houses open in defiance of the order appeared before the Mayor yesterday and, after a friendly talk, McCloskey explained his clock-stopping plan and said nobody will be molested for doing business tomorrow.

43 OF BYRD'S PARTY PERILED

BAY OF WALES, Antarctica, Jan. 27.—(Via Mackay Radio)—(AP.)—Rear Admiral Richard E. Byrd expressed apprehension today for the safety of Pressure Camp and 43 men of the second Antarctic expedition marooned there by disintegration of the vast ice shelf covering the bay.

In addition to the 43 men at the camp, temporary supply base four and a half miles south of the edge of the ice, four others were at Little America, cut off from their comrades.

With the temperature at a little below freezing the ice was disintegrating everywhere and the whole front of the bay flooring eight miles across was crumbling. After a reconnaissance flight, Byrd said he was convinced there was grave danger to the whole flooring of the bay.

AUTO WASHING STRIKE ON

Wilkinsburg police have a strike on their hands—a car washers' strike with 30 men holding out for three cents for each car they wash, instead of the two cents they have been getting.

Two of the borough's leading car washing stations closed Thursday, and the strikers were joined by the crew of a third place yesterday.

The three service stations, unable to wash cars because they have no help, were placed under police guard today when it was rumored the proprietors were seeking other car washers in East Liberty to break the strike.

The strikers point out they earn only from $4 to $4.50 a week and they have to wash more than 200 cars to earn $4. Ten men work on each car that is washed. The current washing price is 50 cents.

Three Men Arrested In Restaurant Fight

George Kasmakos, 46, of 1114 Federal street, proprietor of the O. K. Coffee Shop, 404 East Ohio street, was injured early today when one of two customers threw a cup at him during a fight in his restaurant, according to a police report. The customers, George C. Boggs, of 1707 Pennsylvania avenue, and Harry Drombosky, 23, of 1443 West North avenue, were charged with disorderly conduct, police said.

WILL ROGERS SAYS

WASHINGTON, Jan. 27.

To the Editor, Sun-Telegraph:

As I got the field in Tulsa, "Gypsy" Smith, the great English evangelist, come out to the airport, and we had a fine chat. He talks to ten thousand people a night there.

Will Rogers

A very earnest, fine man, who advertises no particular route to salvation. I asked him in saving Oklahoma for the Lord, to save Alfalfa Bill Murray, him and Jim Ferguson of Texas, for there ain't any more like those two. I just kinder like 'em.

Missouri, Indiana, Ohio and Pennsylvania all passed under us in order. Great old states, whose statesmen have made history. In Washington will see the big show and the actors, maybe see 'em vote on the most momentous question outside of war.

Yours, WILL.

Cohan Writes Birthday Song for Roosevelt

NEW YORK, Jan. 27.—

"What a man, what a M-A-N, what a man!
He's the man of men.
What a man; how he leads the way.
What a birthday celebration,
What a day of inspiration,
What a blessing to the nation—
What a man!"

The subject of that song is President Franklin D. Roosevelt.

It has just been written by George M. Cohan, and will be featured by Cohan at the President's birthday party in the Waldorf-Astoria Hotel, January 30.

Cohan confided he had never met the President, that he would not publish the song, as he considered that would be in "bad taste," and that he did not consider it a patriotic song.

He will wave a flag when he introduces the "What a Man" number, but remarked with a smile that actually he only performed his famous flag-waving act once on a stage—in a play called "Washington, Jr." 29 years ago.

PSALMS ASSURED PROMINENCE IN MERGED CHURCH

MISSION UNITS WILL REMAIN SEPARATE

Psalms will have a prominent place in hymnals of the proposed Presbyterian Church of America, if merger of the Presbyterian and United Presbyterian churches becomes effective, according to the plan of union as drawn up by a joint committee.

The Rev. Dr. A. H. Baldinger, of the Pittsburgh Theological Seminary, in an interpretation of the joint committee's action on "The Concurrent Declarations," said:

"The United Presbyterian Church has no intention to discard the Psalms as a medium of praise, and the proposed 'plan of union' makes adequate provision for their continued use in worship.

ASSURED PLACE

"It definitely states that the Psalter-Hymnal (and by implication the Psalter also) shall be an approved Book of Praise in the united church and specifies further that in future books of praise the Psalms shall be given ample space.

"This is substantially the present position of the United Presbyterian Church. In view of this commitment, it is not unreasonable to suppose that in a united church the value and evident design of the Psalms would come to be more generally recognized and accorded a larger place in worship."

NOT IN MERGER

Dr. Baldinger points out that under the plan of union the Women's General Missionary Society of the United Presbyterian Church "is not to be involved or included in any merger unless and until its consent is given' . . . It's autonomy is thus guaranteed indefinitely and without condition. It will be hampered not at all and may find its sphere greatly enlarged in proportion to the enlarged constituency of the united church."

The plan also provides that the pension system of the two churches shall continue to be administered separately, "until the rights and properties of these two boards can be equitable adjusted."

The Presbyterian church has a pension endowment fund of $15,030,000 and the United Presbyterians a reserve fund of $673,245.

CONTROL UNCHANGED

Colleges, seminaries, orphanages and homes of the two churches also would be unaffected by the merger, it is set forth, except that such control and supervision as is now exercised by the two general assemblies separately would be through the one assembly of the united church.

The plan for organic union will be voted on at the two forthcoming general assemblies. The Presbyterian assembly meets in Cleveland on May 24 and the United Presbyterian assembly at Oxford, O., on June 20. If they approve, the plan will be submitted to the constituent presbyteries for a vote.

Concord Members Plan Neighbor Day

In continuing the loyalty crusade launched last Sunday in the Concord Presbyterian Church, Brownsville road, the congregation has designated tomorrow as neighbors' day. At this time all members will bring neighbors, not affiliated with any church, to the service.

At the 11 a. m. service, the Rev. Dr. J. W. Watson, pastor, will speak on "Being a Neighbor," and at the 8 p. m. service Judge James H. Gray will deliver a special message to men on "Challenging Men."

'Truth' to Be Topic Of Science Church

"Truth" is the subject of the lesson sermons in all Churches of Christ, Scientist, tomorrow. The Golden Text is "He is the Rock, His work is perfect: for all His ways are judgment: a God of truth and without iniquity, just and right is He."

The Story of David -:- CHAPTER XIII -:- Told in Pictures by Dan Smith

After he had spared the life of Saul as he slept in the cave, David dwelt in the wilderness, where his men gave protection to the flocks and herds of Nabal. But when he sent messengers to Nabal asking for food for his men he was denied. David was preparing then to seize the stores by force, but when Abigail, Nabal's wife, learned of this, she had a great store of food loaded upon asses and rode out into the wilderness and met David.

And when Abigail saw David she made haste to dismount, and bowed herself to the ground before David, and told him that when his messengers went to Nabal in vain for food, she did not know their errand.

And it came to pass about ten days later that Nabal died and Abigail was summoned by David to become his wife. And Abigail took five of her handmaidens with her and went out to David and became his wife. (Continued next week)

'DENOMINATION DAY' TO OPEN C. E. WEEK

Christian Endeavor Week, observing the fifty-third anniversary of the founding of the first Young People's Society on February 2, 1881, will be celebrated by more than 3,000,000 youth members of Christian Endeavor societies in North America with services opening tomorrow.

Sunday's services will be termed "Denominational Day" and will emphasize church loyalty and attendance at church services by young people and their older friends. The entire program for the week offers a cross-section of typical Christian Endeavor Society and union activities, and is based on the theme of "I Will Be a Christian."

At 7 o'clock tomorrow evening a Young People's Community Vesper service will be held in the Third United Presbyterian Church of Squirrel Hill in place of the usual Squirrel Hill Community service. Young people from the Sixth Presbyterian, the Third United Presbyterian and the Asbury Methodist Episcopal churches are sponsoring the service.

The Rev. Jacob S. Payton will preach on "When the Whistle Blows."

Play to Be Given By Luther League

The Luther League of Zion's Lutheran Church will present "Mother's Moment" in the Sunday school auditorium, Boggs avenue, Mt. Washington, next Wednesday and Thursday evenings.

Mrs. Anne Yochim is coaching the production. Those taking part include Florence Meyers, Betty Brown, Muriel Perry, Alice Tickner, Eleanor Dumont, Harold Tickner, Ernest Oldoerp, Charles Dumont, Frederick Volkwein and Robert Ackers.

DORMONT HOLDS UP WATER BILL

Dormont Council has refused to pay its water bill for the last quarter of 1933 until an answer is received from the South Pittsburgh Water Company regarding the borough's demand for a $40,089 rebate on their water bill for the past 12 years, it was announced by Councilman Lee Llewllyn, chairman of borough's legal committee.

He said the borough signed a contract in 1912 agreeing to pay the water company $20 annually for water supplied to each of its fire hydrants. Since 1921 the company has been charging the borough $50 to supply water to the 98 hydrants.

Some time ago the water company refused to consider the refund, but another demand for a rebate was made several weeks ago, according to Llewllyn.

MINISTER COMPOSES HYMN

Dedication of Song To Feature 63rd Anniversary

Members of the Bellevue Presbyterian Church, North Fremont street, will celebrate the sixty-third anniversary of their church tomorrow. A feature of the celebration will be the dedication of a hymn, the words and music of which were written by the pastor, the Rev. Herbert Beecher Hudnut.

Another feature of the day's program will be the reading of letters from former ministers and the dedication of an honor roll containing the names of all men and women who have gone into full time service for the church during the history of the church.

REV. HERBERT B. HUDNUT

'TIRED FEELING' BAPTIST TOPIC

The Rev. Dr. Bernard C. Clausen, pastor of the First Baptist Church, Bayard street and Bellefield avenue, will continue his alphabetical series of sermons on memorable sayings of Jesus in his sermon at the 11 o'clock service tomorrow morning when he preaches on the theme of "That Tired Feeling."

At the evening service at 7:45 o'clock his sermon topic will be "Wait Until You See."

'Revaluation' Topic At Rodef Shalom

"Revaluation—Does Your Life Need It as Much as Your Dollars?" will be the subject of Rabbi B. Benedict Glazer's sermon tomorrow morning at the 11 o'clock services of the Rodef Shalom Congregation, Fifth and Morewood avenues.

CONTINUES SERMON SERIES

Dr. Macartney to Give Eighth Talk on Old Heroes

The Rev. Dr. Clarence E. Macartney of the First Presbyterian Church, Sixth avenue, will give the eighth in his series of sermons on "Old Testament Heroes and Their Message For Our Times" tomorrow morning at 10:45 o'clock. His text will be "The Most Brilliant Failure in the Old Testament."

At the evening service at 8 o'clock he will give the first of his "Five Sermons From Life," "There Was No Next Time."

Orchestra to Give Program in Pitcairn

Members of the Methodist Episcopal Church orchestra of Pitcairn will present a musical program Tuesday evening in the Pitcairn High School Auditorium. The program will start at 8:15.

Ban 'Count Your Blessings' As Roosevelt Theme

By AIRCASTER

There was a flurry of excitement among band-leaders, singers and program directors who had counted on the frequent wafting of "Count Your Blessings," a popular song, throughout the various broadcasts dedicated to the President's birthday, January 30.

Program routines are being revised, vocalists are making random selections, and the committee in charge of the nation-wide radio celebration is angry.

"Count Your Blessings" has been tabooed, and the Roosevelt fiesta will struggle along without a theme and sans a signature.

"Don't Count Your Chickens" may be adopted instead.

Edward Guest, the poet who wrote the lyrics for "Count Your Blessings" originally as a poem, objects to the use of anything as commercial as a song, and feels that he might have been consulted at any rate.

The birthday celebration committee cherishes a similar viewpoint, and doesn't think much of the zealous song pluggers who counted more on the popularization of a tune, any tune, than on honoring Mr. Roosevelt.

Only Ferde Grofe, who wrote the melody, will be a little disappointed.

An indirect blow to radio schools which pledge to coach you in microphone technique, and, incidentally, get you on the air, is to be dealt by NBC.

It all came out of the example set by Sophie Tucker, Maude Adams and Lillian Shade (another stage lark, who's to warble regularly for the radio customers).

Each of these women prepared for her radio debut by haunting the studios and learning all about repressions, crescendo peaks and other engineering problems that revolve about the transformation of a stage voice into a sweet series of studio modulations.

Mildred Bailey and CBS parted company yesterday.

The parting followed hectic sessions concerning previous attempts by CBS to sell the swell Bailey singing to prospective patrons.

In each instance, so one hears, Miss Bailey coyly jacked up her price, or pouted about the rest of the artists who would have surrounded her.

The network officials called it an impasse, and Miss Bailey called it a day.

War, Romance, Humor on Air

Three special Sun-Telegraph features—one of them a highly humorous program, and two thrilling dramas, are heard over the air this afternoon and evening.

"Regimented Dead," a drama of the World War, presented in conjunction with the uncensored war photographs appearing in the Sunday Sun-Telegraph, is heard over WSAZ, Huntington, W. Va., at 1:15 p. m.; WMMN, Fairmont, 6:30 p. m.; WWVA, Wheeling, 8 p. m.; WLBW, Erie, 9 p. m. and WWSW, Pittsburgh, at 9:45 p. m.

"A Romanoff Romance," true story of the love of a Russian princess for a commoner, is heard over WWVA, Wheeling, at 5:45 p. m.; WMMN, Fairmont, 7 p. m., and WCAE, Pittsburgh, at 7:45 p. m. The complete story appears in tomorrow's American Weekly magazine, distributed with the Sun-Telegraph.

"Club Car Special," hilarious entertainment furnished by Will Rogers, O. O. McIntyre and other Sun-Telegraph contributors, is heard over WOBU, Charleston, W. Va., at 5:15 p. m. and WAIU, Columbus, O., at 7:15.

enthusiastic support in Congress and among the people to a degree unequaled in our history since George Washington."

GEORGE WASHINGTON declared that "Europe has a set of primary interests which to us have none or very remote relation. Hence she must be engaged in frequent controversies, the causes of which are ESSENTIALLY FOREIGN TO OUR CONCERN."

Even President Roosevelt, while Governor of New York state, addressing the New York State Grange at Albany in February, 1932, declared:

"In common with millions of my fellow countrymen, I worked and spoke in 1920 in behalf of American participation in a League of Nations, conceived in the highest spirit of world friendship for the great object of preventing a return of world war. For that course I have no apology to make.

"If today I believed that the same or even similar factors entered into the argument, I would still favor America's entry into the League, and I would go so far as to seek to win over the overwhelming opposition which exists in this country today.

"But the League of Nations today is not the League conceived by Woodrow Wilson. It might have been, had the United States joined. TOO OFTEN THROUGH THESE YEARS ITS MAJOR FUNCTION HAS BEEN NOT THE BROAD OVERWHELMING PURPOSE OF WORLD PEACE, BUT RATHER A MERE MEETING PLACE FOR THE POLITICAL DISCUSSION OF STRICTLY EUROPEAN POLITICAL NATIONAL DIFFICULTIES. IN THESE THE UNITED STATES SHOULD HAVE NO PART.

"The League has not developed through these years along the lines contemplated by its founder, nor have the principal members shown a disposition to divert the huge sums spent on armaments into the channels of legitimate trade, balanced budgets and payment of obligations.

"American participation in the League would not serve the HIGHEST PURPOSES FOR THE PREVENTION OF WAR AND A SETTLEMENT OF INTERNATIONAL DIFFICULTIES IN ACCORDANCE WITH FUNDAMENTAL AMERICAN IDEALS."

AND YET, with startling change of opinion, President Roosevelt, who characterized the League two years ago as an institution whose major functions "has not been the broad overwhelming purposes of world peace" has declared in a speech last month before the Woodrow Wilson Foundation that:

"Through the League directly, or through its guiding motives indirectly, the states of the world have groped forward to find something better than the old way of composing their differences.

"The League has provided a common meeting place; it has provided machinery which serves for international discussion; and in very many practical instances it has helped labor and health and commerce and education, and last but not least, the actual settlement of many disputes great and small among nations great and small.

"TODAY THE UNITED STATES IS MORE OPENLY CO OPERATING IN THE FULLER UTILIZATION OF THE LEAGUE OF NATIONS MACHINERY THAN EVER BEFORE.

"I believe that I express the views of my countrymen when I state that the old policies, alliances, combinations and balances of power have proved themselves inadequate for the preservation of world peace. The League of Nations, encouraging as it does the extension of non-aggression pacts, of reduction of armament agreements, is a prop in the world peace structure."

TO THOSE who have followed even superficially the history of the League of Nations from its inception to the present day, this declaration presents a challenge.

For the League of Nations HAS FAILED SIGNALLY as a prop in the world peace structure. It has settled NONE of the major disputes, either or Europe or the world.

For years it has been the battleground of two rival groups—one seeking to use it as an instrument of domination, the other seeking to make essential changes in the post-war settlement.

The League has been an elaborate facade for the maintenance of the status quo of the Treaty of Versailles, aggravating the age-long ethnic and political animosities which that treaty perpetuated.

Even Allied statesmen have admitted that it was the structure of a permanent alliance of victor nations against the vanquished nations, and Mussolini has tried to find a way out of the European dilemma by proposing a four-power pact which would secure some means of providing for necessary REVISION of the status quo.

But the Duce was frustrated from the start by France and the Little Entente, which insisted upon the perpetuation of French domination of Continental Europe through the machinery of the League of Nations.

FOR THE UNITED STATES to regard this machinery as a "prop in the structure of peace" and to co-operate with it, means to take sides either with the powers that dominate it or with those that try to modify and soften their domination.

In either case, the American people must understand that it means CONTINUALLY involving the United States in the European entanglements against which the father of our country so earnestly and so wisely warned us.

Allied statesmen assert that implicit in the agreement to consult when peace is threatened, TO TAKE PART IN CONFERENCES, is the obligation TO SHARE IN DECISIONS.

Even reservations cannot preserve independence. To share in decisions means to incur the obligations dependent on those decisions.

Great Britain made reservations with regard to the Locarno treaty, yet even British legal authorities admit that Great Britain is inextricably bound by the Locarno pact.

Nothing is more certain than that conferences and "co-operation" will eventually involve the United States inextricably in the enmities and "entanglements" of Europe.

THE GREAT QUESTION before the people of America is: Shall America follow the policies of Washington or of Wilson?

It is partly true that President Roosevelt enjoys popularity comparable in a way to that of President Washington.

It is more exactly true that President Roosevelt enjoys popular support quite equal to that which President Wilson for a time enjoyed at the zenith of his career.

It is partly true that President Roosevelt enjoys popular support quite equal to that which President Wilson for a time enjoyed at the zenith of his career.

But President Wilson lost his popularity by departing from Washington's injunctions and violating the sentiments and convictions of the people of the United States.

It would seem, therefore, that the best way for President Roosevelt to retain the loyal, enthusiastic support in Congress and among the people to a degree unequaled in our history since George Washington is to adhere patriotically to the principles enunciated by George Washington and KEEP THIS COUNTRY FREE FROM FOREIGN ENTANGLEMENTS.

TONIGHT, 8:00 P. M.—STATION WJAS—PRESENTED BY BORDEN FINE DAIRY PRODUCTS FOR 75 YEARS

TO THE PUBLIC:

WASHINGTON, D. C., Jan. 26, 1934

The National Labor Board issued the following statement today regarding the strike of the Ward Baking Company and the Baur Bros. Bakery employees of Pittsburgh, Pa.:

On November 3rd the representatives of Local 485 of the Bakery Wagon Drivers, Chauffeurs and Helpers Union, affiliated with the International Brotherhood of Teamsters, Chauffeurs and Helpers, and the representatives of Local No. 12 of the Bakery and Confectionery Workers International Union agreed with the Ward Baking Company and Baur Bros. Bakery and the National Labor Board that the decision of the National Labor Board would be accepted as final and binding on all questions on which the parties were unable to agree in their negotiations.

The National Labor Board on December 27th rendered a decision on the matters which were jointly submitted to it by the representative of both unions and the employers.

This decision has been accepted by the employers.

In violation of this decision, which provided that all further disputes should be referred to the Pittsburgh Regional Labor Board and that, pending the decision of such board, there should be no strikes or lockouts, a strike has been called by the representatives of these two local unions.

The action of the local unions has been disavowed by the officers of the International Unions with which they are affiliated.

The National Labor Board condemns the action of the local unions as a breach of their agreement with the employers and with the National Labor Board and as a violation of the decision of the National Labor Board, which the unions covenanted to observe.

Such action can only be conducive to industrial unrest and obstruct the forces of recovery and jeopardizes the success of the machinery established by the President for the peaceful composition of industrial disputes.

The strike should be ended immediately and an agreement signed by the parties in accordance with their agreement and the decision of the National Labor Board.

Speaker at Club Lays Crime To Voter

Declaring that the remedy and responsibility for crime and gangster activity lies in the hands of every voter, C. Ray Hansen, of Chicago, addressed the Friday Morning Club in Carnegie Music Hall yesterday on "Government by Gangland." He drew a terrifying picture of gang activities in Chicago, where he said he found racketeers levying tribute on small business and that gangsters and racketeers are limiting their activities to state lines, fearing the federal courts, and calling them "poison ivy." He advocated applying to the federal courts by telegraph immediately, in the case of a kidnapping, and that the family assert "no ransom will be paid." If this procedure is followed, the victim will be returned unharmed, Mr. Hansen stated.

He believes the connection between politics and crime can be brought to an end if that great body of respectable people appear at the polls and vote at every single election, no matter how trivial the election may be.

Y. W. Budget Campaign Fund Reaches $59,458

With $59,458.25 raised, workers in the annual budget fund campaign of the Young Women's Christian Association have covered more than half the distance toward their $107,682 objective.

Mrs. Phillips Indorsed as State Head

MRS. CHARLES M. BREGG

Indorsement of Mrs. John M. Phillips as candidate for the presidency of the State Federation of Pennsylvania Women, was made yesterday morning at the annual meeting of the Allegheny County Federation of Women's Clubs, the 90 units of which were represented by approximately 400 members.

Other important business transacted at the meeting at the Hotel Schenley was the establishment of a scholarship fund, this being part of the well-planned objective outlined by the far-sighted county president, Mrs. Robert K. Cochrane. Also, the delegates adopted a resolution favoring the erection of a new Juvenile Court Detention Home on the present property in Forbes street and asking for an appropriation from PWA funds.

The public bow of the county choral was another feature of interest, this new group using Mrs. F. F. Rohrer's musical setting of Mary Stewart's "Collect for Clubwomen" as its debut number. Indeed, Mrs. Rohrer's music was largely featured, the soloist, Carolyn Hunt Mahaffey singing two of her numbers at the morning session. Mrs. David V. Murdoch accompanying her, Mrs. Mahaffey sang again in the afternoon.

Two ways there are of gaining riches as you grow older; one is by getting more and more and the other is by wanting less and less, the Rev. Dr. Bernard C. Clausen, pastor of the First Baptist Church, said in his stirring talk on "How to Get Your Money's Worth." The present generation is awakening to the philosophical question of "how," whereas other generations have asked "who" and "why," Dr. Clausen said, making three suggestions as to "How to get your money's worth out of life."

Each person must know what he as an individual wants and he must not be deluded or forced into thinking he wants certain things; he must, by concentration and striving, get what he wants, and then, he must want what he gets when he gets it.

In the afternoon Dr. N. Andrew N. Cleven discussed "The Political Dictator in Hispanic America" and Attorney Ella Graubart talked on "Recent Decisions Affecting Women's Rights" and double quartet from the First Presbyterian Church of Homestead sang.

These officers were elected: First vice president, Mrs. E. R. Davis; recording secretary, Mrs. H. D. Stark; district vice presidents, Mrs. John Howard Phillips, Mrs. H. K. McJunkin, Mrs. J. B. Henry, Mrs. E. F. Johnston, Mrs. John M. Reed and Mrs. Lloyd Thomson.

CURLY PATES MAKE CHIC COIFFURES

The curls in the coiffure above are piled coronet fashion across the top of the head. The cluster of pink daisies over one ear is youthful, vernal.

The whole back of the head is a mass of soft ringlets in the arrangement above. It is banded by a wreath of velvet Parma violets.

By PRUNELLA WOOD

NO MATTER how much they may diverge on ways and means, most of the well-known hairdressers in New York today are massing a woman's curls to one side, in a high diadem across the top of her head, or in a soft mass, off the neck, at the back of her head. Chosen with care and knowledge, one of these arrangements is bound to make her head the best possible shape with what Nature has alloted her, and it so happens that once a good silhouette is achieved, a lot of extraneous ornamentation is permissible.

At the moment, a revival of flowers for coiffures is being touted. It's the spring in the air, which brings about an ecstacy of femininity and an inspiration to live up to the subtle, flowing gowns that are so fashionable.

THE GIRL whose tresses are flat as a stream of water need not weep and hang her sleek head in dismay at her curly-headed sister's extravagant coiffures. She can take time off to get her hair curled by a permanent method, choosing among any number of processes, all masterly in the hands of an expert.

AMONG THE newer types of permanent are those that are put in by steam, and those that use no overhead equipment whatever, merely winding a gal's hair Topsy fashion around a multitude of detached curlers busy with some secret fluid, and permitting her to wander around at will, dancing or doing anything else but stand on her head while the curl comes into being.

Once achieved, any good permanent can be patted and set into any pattern that a hairdresser judges will become his client, and Nature is outdone in her own field of beauty.

Smoking and Drinking Not Necessary to Be Popular

"Must a fellow drink and smoke to be regular?

"Will he be out of the picture if he doesn't?"

It's Ralph asking. And maybe you're going to laugh at his letter. Better not! For perhaps that letter fits you, too! Dear Elsie—

I have a little problem. Will you help me out?

Frequently the discussion arises between my friends and myself, as to whether or not a fellow who has never indulged in smoking or drinking should start doing it, in order to avoid any embarrassment when with a crowd.

I have never smoked, and I've only taken a drink a few times, to be sociable. I haven't any particular desire to take up either. But I don't condemn fellows who smoke or drink, provided they don't go to extremes.

There is no particular reason for my not indulging in smoking, except that as a youngster I was forbidden to by my parents. Now, when I'm old enough to vote and pay taxes, I have no really good reason not to smoke, except that I've kept from it this long, so why start now? Many older people think I should keep free from it, saying, "You're better off without it," and other like remarks.

There have been times when I've thought I was proud to say that I'd never smoked in my life. But on the other hand, there have been other times when I would have been a bit more comfortable if I had been smoking like the others.

It seems to me that a fellow is out of the picture if he doesn't smoke or drink at night clubs, social gatherings and other entertainments of this modern age.

FRIENDS SMOKE

My pal thinks I should smoke. He says that, sooner or later, I'll be one of a crowd where both girls and fellows smoke, and it will make me feel out of place if I'm not doing likewise. I agree with him to some extent. So far, I've gotten along very nicely without either drinking or smoking. Nevertheless, because every fellow I go out with does smoke, I sometimes feel that I should, too, and I am just wondering if I have the right slant on things.

Can a fellow go through life without smoking and drinking (not even now and then) and have as much fun as the fellow who does? And can these two fellows associate with each other? Tell me, please.

RALPH.

Of course you don't need to drink or smoke to be regular. Thousands of our best scouts do neither, and nobody cares. Will Rogers for example. Did you read what happened to him when he had to smoke a pipe in a recent picture? Just what happens to every small boy who takes his first forbidden puff out behind the barn. Bill got sick, and they had to rush him a phony smoke!

REAL PROBLEM

I guess if Bill Rogers can fumble without the fashionable fixings, you can manage, too son.

But, as a matter of fact, it isn't "not smoking or drinking" that's fussing you. It's your fear that you'll fail unless you're a Carbon Copy of everyone else. There's your real problem, written in between the lines of your letter.

All your life you have felt that you must do what other people do.

Get over it!

There are healthy, happy habits which we should all share in common. But there's no sane reason why any of us should do what the other fellow does, just because "it's being done." Popularity is not a matter of what you drink or eat or wear. It depends on what you are. You may be as "different" as you want to be, and that very difference will make you more admired—provided you are also friendly and tolerant.

So stop listening and wondering and fearing "what people will say." Stop being a rubber stamp! Do your own thinking! If you want to be regular and respected, be yourself!

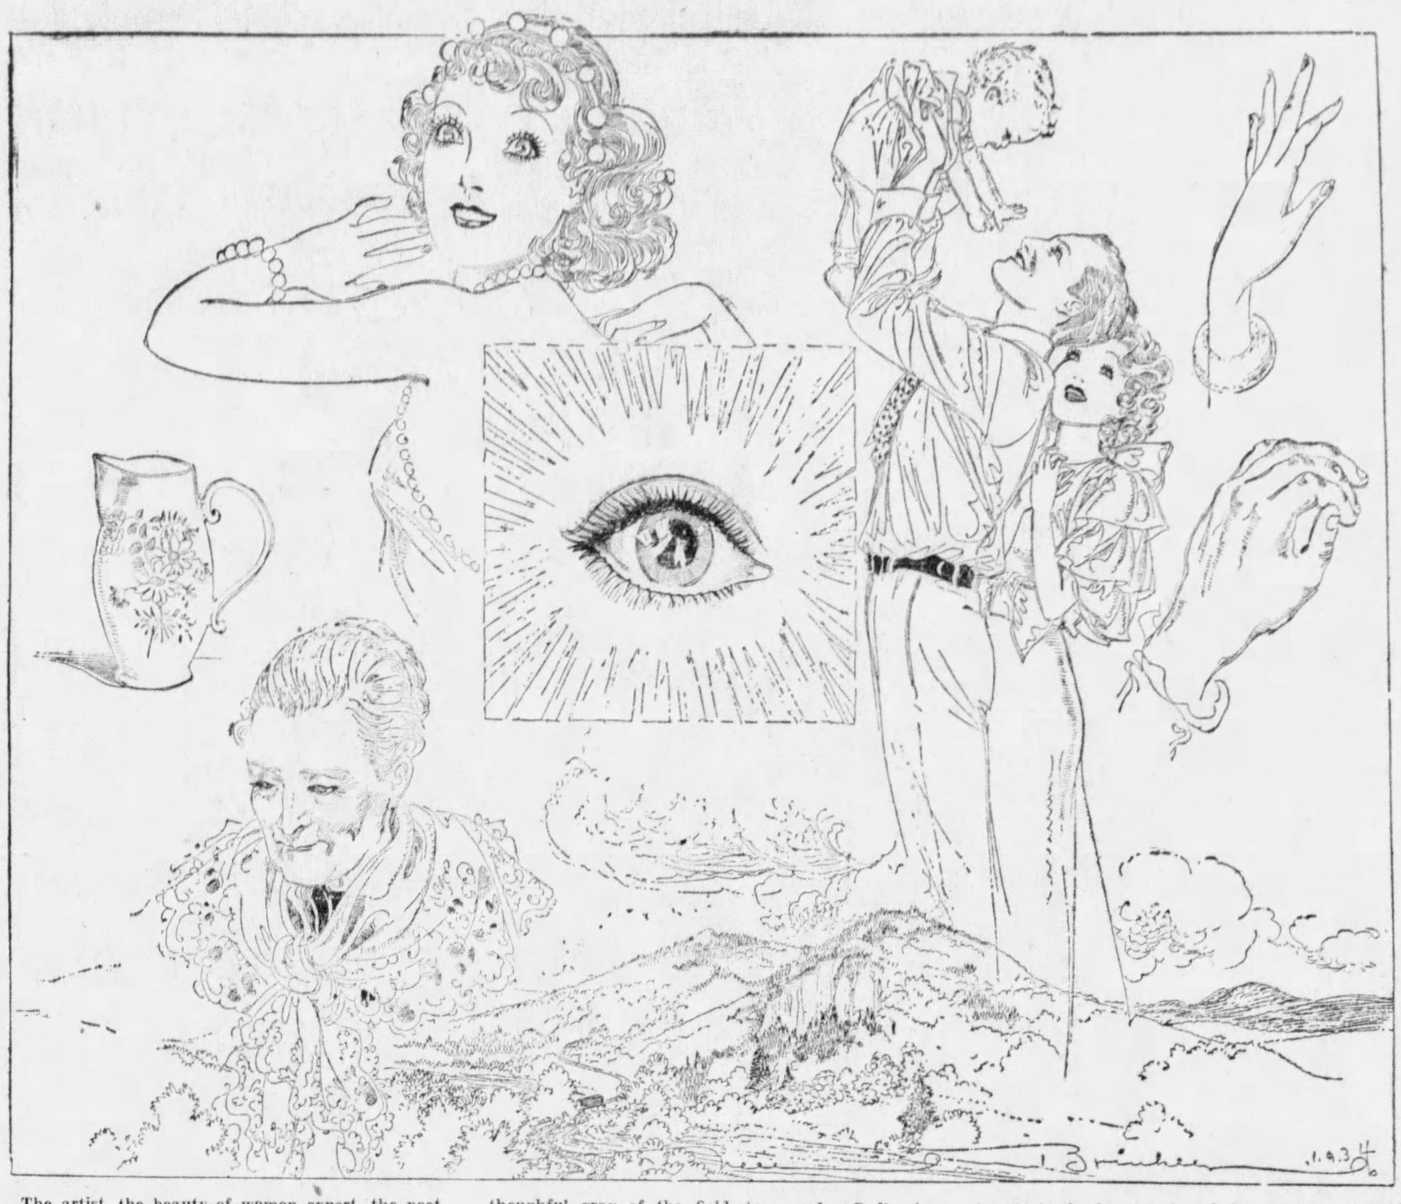
BEAUTY IS IN THE EYES

Drawn by Nell Brinkley



The artist, the beauty-of-women expert, the poet, the charm-analyst, the interpreter of things spiritual, times out of number, all make the EYES the touchstone of Beauty. If the eyes are beautiful—!

I am not meaning that, when I say "beauty is in the eyes." It is the eye that sees Beauty. As we get quite well along on the fascinating trail of life, we begin to see that the world is a patch-work quilt of beauty, a mad array of color, of story, and form. It is a vast museum of pictures, and in the pictures are beautiful girls, dear old faces like dried apples with the bloom still faintly staining them, children, the sea, the shells of the sea, the dreaming mountains, the anemone on the tops of them, the flashing stream, the deer beside it, the gold of one silken hair, the man at work, the baby playing, the shine and shimmer of candles, and the soaring voice of the organ against the stained glass, the flash of the wood-bird against the dark green of the churchly forest roofs, a laugh, a beautiful stone, the spangling stars on the velvet night, a perfect drawing, a bride enfolded in white, a poem singing a song, the figure of Santa Claus—in the same scarlet as the Devil; but oh what a fellow!—the sweep of green branches, the thoughful gray of the field-stone under God's sky, an old hand worn with work—

And in all this vast collection of beauty—what is thought to be beautiful is in the eye that sees. What you think is beautiful, I might believe to be so—but I am not stirred. MY thing-of-beauty-and-a-joy-forever is something else.

To some persons beauty means one thing only; a beautiful girl or woman. Or, at the utmost, a human being. The form and color of a beautiful face and figure as seen in a movie magazine, or a painting, or its living counterpart, is beauty. The rest is just "nice alright." To some others, beauty is pretty well broadcast, but the priceless single example of it in its most precious form is in the face of a child.

The loving son or daughter thinks the old parent beautiful. So does the artist think the face of a characterful old person beauty. The one mingles the constant memories of the changing face of a mother or father from the day it was youthful, with the old face, and cannot separate the two. The artist thinks it beautiful without ever having known it in the smooth, clear bloom of youth. Devoted love helps the one: perception the other.

Only the face of nature can supply the balm of beauty to the heart and soul, for one man. A golden sky at sunset, or a valley in the spring, can straighten out his world for him for a month.

AND—the father and mother of a baby think it the most beautiful thing alive! As you probably know.

Lucky the fellow to whom most of the patch-work quilt, the array of color and story and form, the museum of pictures, of all this whirring world, are BEAUTY! Who can scarcely choose which is most beautiful; to whom one beautiful girl is just a grain of all the beauty lying about.

There's where the child who is a potential artist has "the edge" on some less favored. HE is going to find the old lady beautiful as well as the young one, the child beautiful, the pine and the sand-lily, the blue and gold book of Dickens, and the twilight on a city street. He will not be able to choose between the sea and the mountains. And the young hand will not be more beautiful than the old. Surely he will find "sermons in stones." And a story behind every closed door. Beauty, living, will be waiting for him at every turn of the country road, or even the city street.

—NELL BRINKLEY.

Correct Manners

By Mrs. Cornelius Beeckman

Meeting the Family

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

When a young man spends an evening at a young lady's home for the first time, should she see that he is introduced to the various members of the family?

A says she should as a gesture of hospitality. B claims that it isn't necessary that he meet the family the first time he calls.

W.

A has the sound and gracious point of view about this. Very wise is the girl who capitalizes her background, the background of her home and of her family. She should make the most of this, no matter how modest or simple her surroundings. The well-bred girl or boy entering her home takes it as a matter of social course that she or he is received by the hostess of the home, the girl's mother, as well as by the girl herself. It isn't, of course, necessary that he meet the "various members of the family," unless this comes about in a natural way. Such a wholesale introduction often looks forced. But to be introduced to the mother of the home and to the father, is very important. A uses the perfect expression for this . . . "a gesture of hospitality." And B is thoroughly wrong, for it is the first time the visitor enters our home that he or she should meet the hosts of that home.

I wish that all mothers and fathers would realize how significant is this social co-operation with their children. I believe, however, that most of them do, but too often the children, when they grow up, become careless and casual about this. And definitely it is too important to be careless or casual about.

Early to Bed

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

I live with my brother and my sister-in-law, and they entertain at bridge a great deal. I am usually out in the evening with my friends and very often when I come in . . . usually it is quite late . . . they are still playing cards.

Should I just greet them and go on to my room and go to bed, as I have to get up early in the morning, or should I join them playing, or should I just sit around and wait until they are finished so that I can help with the serving? I never know what to do, and I do not like to hurt my sister-in-law's feelings, but, then, too, I dislike just sitting around in order to help with the serving, especially as I am very busy during the day, and her guests are not my guests.

Please tell me what you would do in a case like this? I know all her friends and like them, but they are not my friends.

L.

I am sure that your sister-in-law and her friends will understand very well that you want to have your own friends and be with them in the evenings and that you do not especially care to wait around for her and her guests to finish their bridge game. So when you come home and enter the room, make a point of being delightfully gracious in your greetings of the guests, and then say good night, explaining forthrightly that you must get up early the next morning. This is a circumstance in which, very definitely, graciousness is demanded in the way you say just what you have to say. Then your leaving the company of guests will not seem a bit brusque.

Given in Marriage

A Sequel to Heart Of a Wife

By ADELE GARRISON

Avis Makes a Last Attempt to Win Noel

"But I can see now," Noel went on, still with the lofty, condescending tone which I guessed he was using deliberately as a part of the vengeful retribution he was wreaking upon Avis Arlen, "that your interest in literature was simply a blind and a bluff; that you are as ignorant as you are pretentious, and that, though God knows why you should wish to interest me, you need that pretense to trap me into this horrible comedy of the sonnets."

"No! Oh, No-el, how cruel!" Avis wailed again. But there was no spirit in her protest, and I wondered if, for the first time in her life, she entirely "had got her come-uppance." That notable feat had nearly been accomplished upon several occasions, but always she had been resilient enough to come back apparently undefeated, with fresh schemes for gaining her ends.

"My writing of those sonnets, the copies of which I just have shown to Mrs. Graham, hell, as you very well know, no touch of sentiment, or even of admiration for you. We were jesting and you made me a wager that I could not write them. It was all the merest foolery. If you don't face Mary and tell her that what I have just said is the truth, I shall—"

ASKS ABOUT WAGER

"Just a second, light of my soul," Mary broke in mockingly, yet with a hint of something rigid in her voice. "I have just told Avis, and I now tell you, that it isn't on the free list to bring my name into this discussion.

"And I absolutely refuse to be bored by any explanations from your Lady of the Sonnets. I wouldn't believe anything she said, either for or against you, if she swore it upon all the Gideon Bibles ever supplied to hotels. I'm only curious about one thing, and you can answer that. What was this wager of which you speak, and did the lady pay it, or did she welsh on you?"

Something flashed into Noel's eyes which made me catch my breath. When Mary's light, mocking voice broke into his tirade against Avis, he had started and shivered as might a roweled horse. Then he had turned and looked steadily at his lovely fiancee, as if to compel her answering gaze. But although she had talked at him, she had carefully kept her eyes averted from his, and I think she was completely surprised when Noel strode toward her, took her chin in his right hand and forcibly lifted her face to meet his.

A DESPERATE STAND

"I warn you," he said thickly. "I am nearly insane over all this. Don't mock me! You ought to know, and I want this girl to hear me say this, that I love you above everything in the world; that I never have loved another woman, and I never shall love anyone else save you. The rest of this lies between us."

Mary swayed toward him, but recoiled stiffly again as Avis broke in with a wailing protest, which I guessed was the girl's last, desperate stand in a cause which even her colossal self-conceit must have seen was a lost one.

"Oh, No-el! How can you be so cruel and so false as to deny your love for me?" she cried. "If you must marry Mary I can stand it, but to deny what we were to each other—that is base and cowardly."

Mary's body stiffened, and I saw her try to twist her chin from Noel's grasp. But his grip was evidently an iron one, and without looking at her he spoke to me.

"Mrs. Graham," he said, "will you take that girl away and lock her up, where she can do no more mischief tonight? Then, if you will come back here, I shall be very glad."

Contract Bridge

HOW TO PLAY and HOW TO WIN

By JOSEPHINE CULBERTSON

The Lead Against the Slam

Unquestionably one of the most difficult problems confronting a bridge player is the choice of the correct lead against an opposing Slam bid. A lead which would be a good one against a Slam at notrump may and probably will prove a most indifferent one against a Slam at a suit declaration. However, it is much easier to classify bad leads against a Slam contract than it is to point out good ones as, if the bidding has been intelligent and accurate, the prospect of defeating the Slam by a lead is in all probability quite remote. There is no doubt that by far the worst possible selection of a lead against a Slam declaration in a suit is a singleton trump as it may easily kill a possible trump trick in partner's hand should partner hold, for instance, three trumps to the Queen or four to the Knave. As a general rule, if the Declarer holds nine trumps, including Ace-King-Knave, in the combined hands, his inclination is to play for an even distribution of the adversely held trumps rather than finesse, unless there is a clear indication in the bidding that a finesse must be taken. In such a case, if the leader has a singleton and decides to lead a trump, then his partner's hope of making a trick with such a combination immediately vanishes.

South, Dealer.

North and South vulnerable.

	♠ A 10 6 ♡ 10 8 6 4 ◇ A K 8 4 3 ♣ 9
♠ J 9 5 4 3 ♡ 5 ◇ J 7 6 5 ♣ 10 6 2	North West East South	♠ 8 2 ♡ Q J 3 ◇ Q 9 2 ♣ J 8 5 4 3
	♠ K Q 7 ♡ A K 9 7 2 ◇ 10 ♣ A K Q 7

The eventual contract was seven hearts played by South, and West, holding the singleton 5, decided that no harm could come from the lead of that suit. The effect, of course, was devastating, the result being that the Declarer made a contract otherwise improbable of fulfillment. It is, of course, true that he might have taken the finesse against the combination in trumps in the East hand anyway, but as a matter of fact that play would not have been normal or natural. The natural line of play with the trump holding in the North and South hands would have been to lay down one of the high honors and possibly finesse on the second round if the Queen or Knave dropped on the first. However, West, by his Opening lead, presented him with what might otherwise have been an impossible contract.

TODAY'S QUESTION

	♣ K 10 3 2
♣ A 5	North West East South

South, who is playing notrumps, leads the deuce of clubs from North and plays the Queen from his own hand. Which card should West play?

Answer: The Ace. There is no point in holding up the Ace with only one other and it will lose a trick if East holds the Knave and two small cards.

How to Keep Well

By DR. ROYAL S. COPELAND

Peptic Ulcer a Common Ailment

Dr. Copeland

Not so long ago I told you about the hundredth anniversary of the publication of a book by Dr. Beaumont. It was pointed out that this was the first accurate, scientific description of the processes of digestion as they occur in the stomach.

Today I want to tell you about "peptic ulcer" or ulcer of the stomach. This is a common ailment and for many years was confused with other stomach disturbances.

As I have said, little was known concerning the action of the juices of the stomach. Maladies of the stomach were erroneously diagnosed and little treatment could be offered the victims of these disorders. Such words as "dyspepsia," "sour stomach" and "hyperacidity" were vaguely used and the victims in desperation resorted to the old-fashioned remedy of baking soda. As a rule this gave relief, but only of a temporary nature.

Fortunately, following Beaumont's epoch making discovery, rapid strides were made in a scientific understanding of the action of the stomach. This, together with the invention of the X-ray machine, permitted physicians accurately to diagnose and treat certain disorders.

Today we know that peptic ulcer is a definite disease of the lining of the stomach. With proper diet and medication, relief and complete cure are possible.

Of course, in many instances, cure is only possible by means of surgery. Here, too, the improved skill of the modern surgeon enables the victim to be safely relieved of his disability. In former times the afflicted individual was unable to take nourishing food because of the severe pain it caused. He soon became undernourished, weakened, and susceptile to infections that proved fatal.

Though the cause of peptic ulcer has not yet been satisfactorily explained, it is probable that it is the result of various factors. General lack of resistance, injury to the lining of the stomach, abnormal digestive action of the pepsin and hydrochloric acid of the stomach, increased nervous tension, infection and constitutional disorders, are factors that must be considered.

As a rule, the condition is most frequently found in young and adult middle life. It may be acute or chronic. Acute ulcer usually occurs in conjuntion with some infection or a chronic wasting disease. The chronic form is likely to follow and may persist for many years.

The sufferer from this ailment complains of pain in the region of the stomach. This pain occurs two or three hours after eating. The pain is accompanied by irritability, nausea, eructations or vomiting.

JUNIOR PATROL

This is not very good camping weather, fellows!

But that isn't any reason why we shouldn't talk about it today. We were just thinking how tasty food you cook out in the open sometimes is! And we were thinking maybe right now would be a good time for Junior Patrol members to begin learning how to cook.

Ask your mother about it—maybe she will show you how and let you practice some cooking. Fried ham and eggs is a swell breakfast. And wheat cakes are mighty tasty.

Of course, we expect that most all our girl Junior Patrol members already know how to cook some, and they are still learning more about it. Mostly, we are writing this for the boys. But we will say—girls, if you don't know how to cook a little, you ought to start learning. And don't forget, everybody likes fudge. How does a fudge party sound? Try it, captains!

Edith Cline, of Murrysville, Pa., R. D. No. 1, is a new captain today. She sends in 10 pledges for her members, and says that most all of them go to the same school she does. That makes it dandy, Edith, because when you go to school with friends you meet them often and get to know them well. Have you selected a name for your patrol yet?

Now here's anotner new captain. Her name is Catharine Schelm of R. D. 7, Sarver, Pa., near Brackenridge. She has 15 members and we are sending her an armband right away because they have elected her a captain.

Stamp collecting is the hobby of Bernard Goldstond, of 1312 Griswold street, Sharon, Pa. He writes to ask us to tell all Junior Patrol members about it. You bet, Bernard—we think it's a good hobby, too, and we hope lots of our members try it. Maybe we could start a stamp exchange.

HAVE COLOR IN CHEEKS

If your skin is yellow—complexion pallid—tongue coated—appetite poor—you have a bad taste in your mouth—a lazy, no-good feeling—you should try Olive Tablets.

Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets—a substitute for calomel—were prepared by Dr. Edwards after 20 years of study.

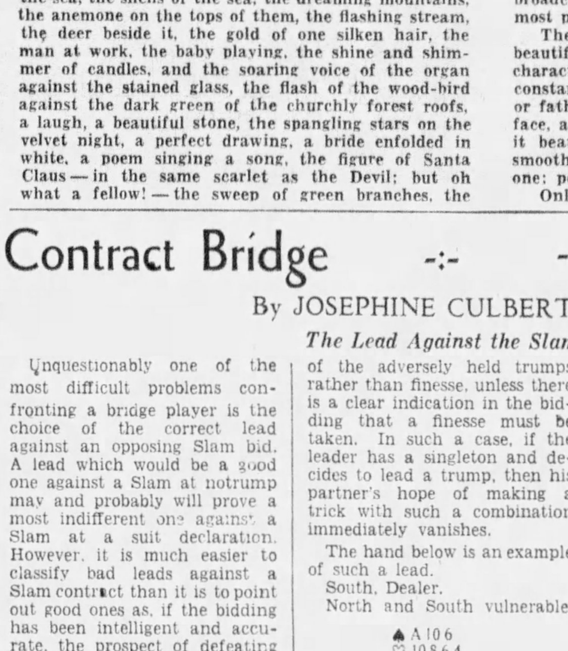
Olive Tablets are a purely vegetable compound. Know them by their olive color.

To have a clear, pink skin, bright eyes, no pimples, a feeling of buoyancy like childhood days, you must get at the cause.

Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets act on the liver and bowels like calomel—yet have no dangerous after-effects.

They start the bile and help overcome constipation. Take nightly and note the pleasing results. Millions of boxes sold yearly. 15c, 30c, 60c.

LAURA WHEELER DESIGNS



Cross-Stitch Is in Vogue

Cross-stitch today need not be limited to table linens, scarfs or cushions. It is especially smart as a decorative touch on chair or footstool. This lovely bouquet adds a touch of rich color to a chair and is equally handsome on a pillow. The smaller sprays can decorate the chair seat or a footstool. The motifs could all be used together on an in-between cloth with the large spray forming a striking note of color in the center and the small sprays decorating corners or edges. The design is easy to follow since the flowers are all outlined, thus setting them off from the rest of the pattern and making the design clear.

Pattern 628 comes to you with a transfer pattern of a motif 12 inches square, and six sprays averaging 5 inches in height; a color key and directions for using the motifs on a variety of articles.

Send 10c for this pattern to Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph Needlecraft Department, 82 Eighth avenue, New York City.

Household Hints

Add a little turpentine to shoepolish that has become hard and it will soften in a few minutes.

Macaroni or spaghetti stock can be used in preparing cream sauces, thus reducing the amount of milk required. For each cup of milk use half as much stock.

For sweet and inexpensive desserts the following are suggested: Baked apples with brown sugar, sweet sauces added to boiled rice, cornstarch puddings, plain cake, fruit betty and fruit dumplings.

For appetizing hot canapes, devil small oysters and serve on buttered rounds of hot toast, stuff tiny tomatoes with rice and brown in a moderate oven and serve on squares of toast or mix sardines with pickle relish and spread on bars of hot buttered toast. These hot canapes require forks.

Pillows may be washed without removing the feathers. Scrub in a weak washing soda solution, using a good suds. Repeat in a second suds if necessary. Rinse in two or three luke-warm washes. Squeeze out excess water and place on sheet in a warm place, preferably in the sun. Beat pillows at intervals while drying.

The Beauty Box

By HELEN FOLLETT

With powder pads, be reckless and extravagant. Or buckle down to the business of washing them frequently. Atmospheric dust falls lightly on the skin but when the pad is used vigorously, it forces grime into the pores, builds blackheads, which creates pimples and there's a kettle of fish for you! The fastidious woman never touches up her complexion with rouge and powder unless she is laying the cosmetic treasures upon a clean skin surface. If make-up is of the right kind, properly applied, it should do service for hours.

Milk has rejuvenating properties. The woman who is played out, whose nerves are jiggling, who can't sleep, whose skin is gray and beginning to wrinkle would do well to top off each meal with a glass of milk and cream, half and half. Many beauty ills are due to diet deficiency of one kind or another. The average person needs dairy products, vegetables, sea foods, meats and fruit. Finicky eaters seldom have bright eyes, luxuriant hair and good complexions. More beauty is bought at the grocer's shop than is ever realized.

Worry and loss of sleep form a combination that puts creases in the celestial countenance. A diet that is low in fats, sweets and starches will do it, too, and quickly. Tissues must have nourishment or they go into a state of collapse, with cutaneous covering too large, and lines forming. Don't use much hot water, have it just warm enough to rub up a good lather. The daily ice friction is highly recommended. Hardens fibers and sends blood streams about their business. Use a heavy cream every night, though the heavens fall; tap it in lightly.

Time now for hand care. Keep on good terms with the dish mop and the rubber gloves if you are boss of the kitchen. Harsh soaps and cleaning powders are responsible for many a case of red, rough mitts. Make up a hand lotion. It's no trouble, and costs almost nothing. Here is a tried-and-true formula that never fails: Soak 60 grains of whole gum tragacanth in 14 ounces of stronger rosewater for three days, add one ounce of alcohol, one ounce of glycerine, and a few drops of the favorite perfume. Disappears almost at once.

MUSCULAR RHEUMATIC PAINS

IT takes more than a salve to draw them out. It takes a "counter-irritant"! And that's what good old Musterole is: soothing, warming, penetrating and helpful in drawing out the pain and congestion when rubbed on the sore, aching spots.

Muscular lumbago, soreness and stiffness generally yield promptly to this treatment, and with continued application once an hour, blessed relief is often experienced in five hours.

Even better results than the never-failing old-fashioned mustard plaster. Used by millions of people. Recommended by many doctors and nurses. All druggists. In three strengths: Regular Strength, Children's (mild), and Extra Strong.

Musical Film In Warner

By MARGARET RUSSELL

Every so often there comes to the screen a drama within a drama. Only rarely can it be claimed that there is drama within a drama within a drama, as is the case in the Warner this week. "Let's Fall in Love," musical film, is a Cinderella story of a circus girl who becomes a great Hollywood star by changing her name and personality to a type in demand. That is the outer rim of the dramatic circle. The middle ground of the circle is this girl's personal struggle for success, for love of the director who "discovered" her. The innermost drama is not revealed in script or on screen.

That is the intensely real drama of Ann Sothern, co-star of the film, who also changed her name and personality, even the color of her hair, before she found favor in the eyes of the great god Success. As Harriet Lake, musical comedy actress, she was acclaimed for a brief moment as a languorous brunette in films. She returned to New York and appeared in "Of Thee I Sing," "Smiles," "America's Sweetheart" and "Everybody's Welcome."

The fairy godmother that changed Miss Lake's pumpkin into a glamorous coach, was her intense admiration for the late E. H. Sothern, brilliant stage actor. So deeply did she revere him that she changed her name to Ann Sothern and made her dark locks blonde. The real-life Cinderella was "re-discovered" and given an enviable role opposite Edmund Lowe in this musical production, "Let's Fall in Love," in which she appears as a significant screen personality.

There is something of Deitrich in the new star; something of Fay Wray; something of Gloria Swanson and a great deal of herself. When a real Cinderella plays a Cinderella role on the screen, some sparks of genius are apt to fly.

"Let's Fall in Love" is a conventional theme, but it takes good-natured cognizance of the hokum of the film business. Hollywood burlesquing itself is always delightful. Fox Movietone News, an Ely Culbertson "bridge experience" and a travelogue picture of South America complete the program.

Jean and Boy To Part

By HARRISON CARROLL

HOLLYWOOD, Jan. 23.—Those two youthful sweethearts, Jean Parker and Pancho Lucas, will not follow parallel acting careers after all.

After playing a bit in "Viva Villa," and another in "The Cat and the Fiddle," Pancho expects to give up his screen career for the study of law. He may even enter a northern school, either Stanford or the University of California at Berkeley, in the February term.

The idea meets with Jean's approval except that she would like to see Pancho play in one MGM picture with her before he deserts the cinema work for good.

Both these youngsters admit their fondness for each other, but there has been no talk of an early marriage. They are 17 years old and they have careers to think of. In "Little Women," Jean made a very definite impression.

But by the time Pancho is ready for his bar examination, they will be 24. Then they admit they expect to marry.

When Al Jolson goes East for radio appearances, he and Ruby Keeler will face a separation possibly of several months. Al has no definite date to return to Hollywood and Ruby won't start her next picture with Dick Powell until the middle of February.

Penn Packed To Witness 'Vanities'

By WILLIAM J. LEWIS

The Penn ushers got a real workout yesterday. Earl Carroll's "Vanities," standing the customers up for the first show, and packing those waiting for the second behind those velvet covered ropes in the foyer, from the barrier to the door, was the cause. The red-coat generals waiting to herd the folks into the seats must have thought "happy days are here again."

Harry Hoehle, director, and the Penn band boys must have had the same thought when the orchestra stage ascended from its pit for the first time in many many months, and the moosickers saw a house packed from here to way back there. So Director Hoehle waved his stick, and the way the boys went into that "Orpheus" overture showed they were in the mood to prove the happy-day idea.

And when the curtain went up on the first scene of "Vanities" there was Ray Bolger ready to introduce Jean Travers, who was to introduce the "most beautiful girls in the world" with her lyrics pertaining to "Along Came Love," each scene introducing a succeeding one until about a score of them had happened, and the audience was satisfied that it had seen a show.

And indeed it had, a lively colorful show, of song, comedy, dancing, and pretty faces, as well as legs and torsos of a stage full of those most beautiful girls in the world. These gals are "lookers" for sure!

Mr Bolger, a happy and comical clown, kept the folks laughing as he alternated as sort of master of ceremonies and character comedian in the skits, and wowed 'em completely with his eccentric jelly-legged dancing. The Collette Sisters and the Three Samuels Brothers, all nifty steppers, varied their routine from tapping to acrobatics, and drew heavy applause. The skits, of the black-out variety, went in for that free-and-easy humor that is more laughable than delicate. "The Neon Maypole," with striking electrical effect, was the outstanding novelty number.

On the screen Robert Montgomery and Madge Evans, in "Fugitive Lovers," rode a transcontinental bus until the law caught up with Robert, an escaped prisoner. By that time he was a hero, and a pardon awaited. An authentic Pittsburgh view is part of the picture, which is interesting, and has a most realistic blizzard as the background of its climax. Ted Healy is in the cast.

Hearst Metrotone News, including shots pertaining to President Roosevelt and the national celebration of his birthday, completed the bill.

Singer Is Hit In Pitt

By ZORA D. UNKOVICH

Fast-talking gangsters manage to amuse you, beautiful girls to dance satisfyingly, a black-faced quartet to win your applause, but a piece of infectious feminine impudence, who appears for too short a time, is the hit of the show in the Pitt.

Character singing, humorously well done, is Ruth Roye's independent part in the stage revue. Of especial merit is her Dance-Hall Sadie version of "All for Ten Cents a Dance." Equally appreciated is her "Old Man of the Mountains" caricature.

The rest of the vaudeville is in the form of a musical comedy entitled "Sweet and Lowdown," starring Arthur and Morton Havel in slapstick roles.

In the chorus numbers the Chester Hale girls shine in a sinuous dance of silver and white. Acrobatic rhythm is supplied by Audrey Gibson. Thelma Temple plays the dancing lead of the skit. The Honey Boys, dancing porters, appear at welcome intervals. Also popping in frequently is the show's clowning male dancer, Joe Evans.

On the screen James Dunn and Claire Trevor appear in a story of a too-smart publicity man who learns he is not so smart after all, in "Jimmy and Sally." "Goofy Goat," a color cartoon, and Graham McNamee's news briefs round out the bill.

Davis Movie Dramatic

By MARY SHINE

"Cross Country Cruise," in the Davis this week, allows a peep into the lives and loves of a dozen or more people traveling across country by bus. There is the usual gabby Gus, played by Eugene Pallett, a good-natured bore; an effervescent gold-digger in Alice White, and Lew Ayers as a wealthy young man being sent by his father to a lumber camp to learn how to work.

Then, too, there is a jealous wife and her husband, Alan Dinehart, who has asked June Knight to marry him, without telling her he already has a wife. The three travel on the bus together under great tension. During one of the bus stops, the wife is murdered with a bow and arrow. June has told Dinehart she is through with him and he makes the crime appear to be hers. As she is an expert archer, the evidence seems conclusive.

Lew has fallen in love with June, but has been misled with lies about her by Alan. He suddenly realizes how wrong he is, that she's innocent of the crime, and so conducts a side investigation that solves the murder.

The climax comes as the speeding bus crashes into a police plane when it lands, and plunges over an embankment into a river. There, dear, breathless reader, we'll leave it, and you, in such suspense that the Davis will attract you to see the end.

All in a Day

By Mark Hellinger

Anecdote De Luxe

HERE is one of those stories that might be new—or might be fifty years of age. Where these yarns come from, or how they originate, is something I know nothing about, I call them anecdotes, pound them out, and let them go at that.

This one comes from Bob Higgins, of Pittsburgh, and concerns a couple who were happily married for some 10 years or so. By that statement, you can see immediately that the story is fiction.

At any rate, in the eleventh year of the marital state, wifie turned bliss into blister by developing the drinking habit. She was no ordinary drinker. By no means. It was nothing at all for her to guzzle a couple of quarts of gin a day—and then look around for something to drink. She must have been a lulu.

I don't have to tell you that her husband, a sober and respectable gentleman, was greatly worried. He tried to point out the evil of her ways, evil as you and I.

"Darling," he would cry, "whither are we drifting? If you don't drop this terrible habit, what is to become of you? What will be the ultimate result?"

Whereupon wifie would guzzle a goblet.

"Stop being silly," she would return. "What'sh the harm in a lil' gin? Anshwer me that, big boy. What'sh the harm in a lil' gin?"

This went on for several months. Hubby's worries increased with each passing day. His wife, if anything, was drinking more now than ever. So while sitting in the club one afternoon, he took a doctor friend into his confidence.

He unloaded the entire tale on the medico. He sobbingly pointed out the manner in which his dear wife was disintegrating via the gin bottle. And when he finished, he leaned forward and clasped the doctor's hand.

"Tell me," he asked pleadingly, "what am I to do? She will not take any of the accepted cures. She will not do anything to help herself. Which way shall I turn?"

This doctor was an unusual medico. Instead of thinking about the size of the bill he would send, he actually paid attention to the case in hand. He hesitated—and then he nodded.

"I have the solution," he said slowly, "It is a most unusual solution, but it will work. We must frighten your wife out of the habit. Don't be alarmed. Her fright will not last long. But when it happens, it must be thorough.

"Now listen carefully. The very next time your wife becomes unconscious from gin, you will call me immediately. We will place her in a car and drive to a nearby cemetery, of which I am a director. We will put her upon a newly-dug grave and I will don a white sheet.

"When she awakens, everything will be in readiness. She does not know me, and I will make my voice as sepulchral as possible. I will speak to her of her drinking sins, and you can leave the results to me.

"This may all seem very silly to you. But I know what I am talking about. You have a difficult problem on your hands, and a very definite fright is the only solution. Carry out my orders as I give them to you, and we will not fail."

"God bless you, doctor," cried the husband fervently.

"I hope so," replied the medico . . .

The big doings took place that very night. After dinner, wifie marched into the library with her bottle of gin and made a thorough job of it. For the first time in his life, hubby joined her. The little lady started on her second bottle—and before she had reached the halfway mark, she had passed completely out of the picture.

The husband rushed excitedly to the phone and called the doctor.

"Everything is in readiness," he said. "Can you come right over?"

The doctor could. He was over within 20 minutes, and both the woman and the plan were immediately carried out. They took poor wifie to the cemetery and placed her upon an upraised mound. The doctor wrapped himself in his spooky sheet and the husband retired to a distant vantage point. Then they awaited developments.

Around midnight, the woman stirred. Soon she opened her eyes. She glanced about her. And her gaze fell upon the ghostly figure of the doctor who was waving his arms slowly in front of the grave.

She sat bolt upright.

"Where," she cried, "where am I?"

The medico's voice was as heavy as a debutante's head after the Beaux Arts ball.

"You are a thousand miles from the ends of nowhere."

The woman repeated the words slowly.

"That," returned the physician, "is correct."

Silence for a moment. Then—

"Tell me," said the woman, "How long have I been here?"

The woman sighed.

"And you?" she asked. "How long have you been here?"

The doctor grinned to himself. His plan was working! The woman's voice told him that. His reply came in mournful tones.

The wife looked searchingly at the ghostly figure. Then she rubbed her hands.

"In that case," she said, "you're better acquainted around here than I am. Can you get me a bottle of gin?"

Experimental Theater To Give New Play

Next Monday evening the Experimental Theater in Aiken avenue gives its first performance of a new play, "Granny Preferred," by Clark Logan and Harold Allen. Mrs. W. C. Hall is directing the performance, and Mrs. T. C. Clifford, of the Dickens Fellowship, has the featured role of the grandmother. Harold Allen, by the way, is an uncle of the author of "Anthony Adverse."

Jungle Terror In Stanley's Fine Film

By MICHAEL SHAW

Back in the days before the movies became vocal, Cecil B. DeMille took Barrie's "Admirable Crichton," rechristened it "Male and Female," and turned it into a desert island holiday. Perhaps the great success of that picture tempted Mr. DeMille to return to the castaway theme.

If so, there was a splendid story ready to hand in the novel, "Four Frightened People," by E. Arnot Robinson. Sticking pretty close to the book, and even letting the original title ride this time, Mr. DeMille turned out a highly exciting film, full of shivers, relieved by a dash of humor. It opened in the Stanley yesterday.

The scene is the Malay jungle, and the castaways lost therein are a bespectacled Chicago school teacher (Claudette Colbert); a downtrodden rubber engineer (Herbert Marshall); a boastful war correspondent of radio fame (William Gargan), and a prominent clubwoman (Mary Boland).

Leo Carrillo, as a half-breed who calls himself white and rejoices in the name of Montague, undertakes to guide them through the wilds, misses the trail and eventually is killed by a pygmy's arrow. Miss Boland, held as hostage by another tribe, lectures the women on birth control, rouses them to revolt against the men, and finally reaches safety with all sails flying in triumph.

The other three face many perils—wild animals, snakes, hostile natives, fatigue, exposure, hunger, thirst. In the face of all this, Miss Colbert and Mr. Marshall, a beaten pair back home, "expand," as the movie has it, while Mr. Gargan "shrinks."

The school teacher breaks her glasses, takes command of the party and, clad in leopard skins and less, brings both men to her feet with her charm. Mr. Marshall is courageous and resourceful, and Miss Colbert, at first inclined to worship Mr. Gargan, falls in love with the engineer.

Mr. Marshall is already married; but the ties of civilization seem far away—until the way to rescue appears. Then Miss Colbert tries to keep the news from the man she loves, so that they may remain together forever in the jungle. She fails; but there is a happy, and, incidentally, a clever ending, just the same.

The picture is done with much more restraint than Mr. DeMille usually displays, and there are many episodes of genuine suspense, as when a great cobra rises beside Miss Colbert and Mr. Gargan shoots it only just in time. A foreword says the jungle shots were made in the South Seas, and they look real enough.

There is also on view at the Stanley a pretty little musical comedy, "Not Tonight, Josephine," photographed in color, and starring Pittsburgh's own Frank McHugh as Napoleon.

Churches Are Promoting Dramas

By GEORGE SEIBEL

Mr. Seibel

The Playhouse of the East Liberty Y. M. C. A. put on its revue, "Around That Corner," last night—in eight acts and 36 scenes, with a cast of more than 40, and Oscar E. Norbeck as director. With the Choral Club assisting under Raymond S. Miller, and Lester C. Brecht as narrator, satire and parody held sway as amusing lines pointed sound morals.

Another church group of the East Liberty district is preparing the production of a mss. drama that has been seen only in New York. The Maskers will put on "Here Today," by George Oppenheimer, February 12-13, at the Calvary Parish House, 315 Shady avenue. Charles Woolridge, Jr., will direct, while the principal parts will be played by Eda Szeckay and George M. Rowland, Jr. John Johns, who did such admirable work in their last production, is again in the cast. The comedy is one that satirizes two well-known literary people—Dorothy Parker and Robert Benchley, under thin disguises.

One of the striking indications of the churches' changed attitude toward the theater is afforded by the plans of the Epworthian Players, Methodists of course, taking their name from the birthplace of John Wesley. This group, a central dramatic club for the 16 M. E. churches of the South Hills, is preparing to present "The Passing of the Third Floor Back," Jerome K. Jerome's fine drama in which Forbes Robertson starred with great success. D. M. Hall is directing the rehearsals, and the play will be sponsored for charitable purposes by the Pittsburgh district of the church.

PITT. WEST VIRGINIA RESUME LONG FLOOR SERIES

SUN-TELEGRAPH SPORTS

JAMES J. LONG'S SPORTS COMMENT

The sudden shift in Pitt's basketball fortunes, which saw the Panthers come from behind to defeat Notre Dame by the sheer brilliance of their attack after floundering around in the doldrums of indifferent play for half of the season, causes Blue and Gold supporters to wonder whether Claire Cribbs and his mates are going to start another of their mid-season scoring orgies, one that would, for a time at least, give them the coveted record of a point a minute. A year ago, starting with the Notre Dame victory, the Carlsons went on a rampage for a while and tore through the opposition, scoring almost at will. It was the second Duquesne game that stopped them, but in the meantime they showed their followers that they could play basketball. That's what the present outfit has in mind.

Claire Cribbs

The entire Pitt team took somewhat of a razzing as it stumbled along early in the season, and during the remainder of the campaign the players would like to make up for their numerous errors. They are hoping that the games between now and the second Duke encounter of 1934 will serve to give them a poise and confidence that will enable them to win that long sought victory over Chick Davies' crack squad. Only the West Virginia tilt here tonight and the W. & J. meeting next Saturday remain for the getting up of steam in the meantime, and Dr. Carlson admits he is looking beyond those two numbers to the game of February 6, when he will get his final chance of the year at the Dukes and the city title.

BASEBALL AND HOCKEY IRON MEN MEET

When Murray Murdoch, of the New York Rangers, played his 400th consecutive hockey game the other night, a little side feature was a dressing room introduction to a visitor of iron-man fame in another sport. The caller was Lou Gehrig, Yankee first baseman. Against Murdoch's 400 hockey games Gehrig has played 1,350 major baseball games in a row.

It was brought out that neither had ever realized he was streak. It was revealed that neither had ever realized he was anywhere near a record until informed of it by newspapermen. Murdoch said he had played more than 300 games before he ever knew about it. Gehrig insisted that Murdoch's streak was better than his own. Lou said he would get worn out just looking at that many hockey games.

SHOTTON'S PAY SETS RECORD FOR COACHES

Scientists report no headway so far in their efforts to figure out whether Burt Shotton is going up or down in his shift from manager of the Phillies to coach of the Reds, but one thing certain is that Shotton is losing nothing on the financial side. His contract in Quakertown had two years more to run, and that has got to be made good, at the rate of $15,000 per season. Accordingly, the Phil owners have agreed to make up the difference between Burt's pay in Cincinnati and what he would have drawn for 1934 and 1935 if he had been retained on his former job.

Burt Shotton

Still drawing $15,000 a year, therefore, Shotton has the distinction of being the highest-salaried coach in the history of baseball. He will be getting more money than the great majority of the players in the major leagues, and more than some of the managers, including even the one under whom he will be working in Cincinnati, Bob O'Farrell.

At that, Stuffy McInnis did a little better than Shotton in leaving the same managerial post after the season of 1927, as Stuffy got a year's pay, or a compromise sum for doing nothing.

ROSS HOODOO TO ITALIAN-AMERICAN FOES

The winner of next Friday's return fight between Tony Canzoneri and Cleto Locatelli is scheduled to get a match with Barney Ross for the world lightweight championship, but inasmuch as both Canzoneri and Locatelli are of Italian blood, the successful battler, before he can hope to win the title, will have to figure out a way to overcome a hoodoo which so far has baffled every member of his race who has gone up against it. For Ross, a truly great fighter under any conditions, has been a particular jinx to Italian-American opponents.

The Chicago Jewish lad started the string late in 1932 by knocking out Frankie Petrolle, younger brother of the Fargo Express. Frankie was thereafter termed the Fargo Freight. Battling Battalino came next, going the route but taking a beating. Johnny Farr was the third victim in the same year. Ross resumed the drive in 1933 with a decision over Billy Petrolle, and then he won the lightweight crown by outpointing Canzoneri. Farr came back for a second dose and got it, suffering a knockout. Ross next gave Canzoneri a chance to regain the championship and beat him a second time. Sammy Fuller then went the way of the others, and last Wednesday Ross gave Billy Petrolle such a lacing in a second meeting that the Fargo Express will make no more trips. So in less than a year and a half Ross has met Italian-American opponents nine times without losing a fight.

WARBURTON GETS GRID NUMBER FOR AUTO

Having demonstrated to the grief of numerous foemen that No. 13 was no jinx to him on the football field, Cotton Warburton, Southern California's all-America quarterback, at whom Pittsburgh fans will get a look next fall, is now driving an automobile that carries the hoodoo numeral. Bill Henry reports from Los Angeles that a little fellow with whitish hair and wizened features edged up to the counter at the Auto Club. After license plates. Almost before any of the clerks could get around to waiting on him, gossip had spread the news across the vast floor. "Hey—that's Warburton!"

Cotton Warburton

And whaddaya suppose the little man wanted? Yep, a license with the number 13 on it, just like he wore during the football season. Did he get it? Well, in some miraculous manner they dug one up for him, and now he's all fixed for the new year. But Scooter isn't satisfied. He's hoping next year to get 1-W-13, the first figure "1" looking something like an "I," which would stand for Irvine, his front name.

Warburton's automobile has caused a stir in some circles. An eastern meanie, running across a picture of Cotton and his machine, clipped it out and sent it to a Los Angeles sports scribe with this unkind note: "Didn't you sports writers inform us just a short time ago that Warburton was having a terrible time working his way through school? Went to South Bend for the Notre Dame game without any baggage, etc.; somebody had to buy him an overcoat so he wouldn't freeze to death. And here he is, an automobile owner—looks like a good machine, too."

NEALE SILENT REGARDING YALE GRID POST

MORGANTOWN, W. Va., Jan. 27.—(AP.)—Earle (Greasy) Neale may be moving along to Yale as backfield coach, but you won't find it out from him.

But whether or not Neale gets the job, his refusal to confirm or deny the reports has stirred up the dormant coaching situation at West Virginia University, where he has been mentor for three years.

The New Haven Register, in a copyrighted article, said Neale will be put in charge of Yale's backfield.

Asked what he had to say about it, Greasy laconically replied:

"Nothing."

In the early part of a disastrous season last fall, the cry was for Neale's coaching scalp. It culminated in a meeting of the alumni Thanksgiving Day, at which a vote of confidence was given Athletic Director Harry A. Stansbury and all his policies.

Since then the situation has quieted down, although there has been a general feeling that Neale will not be back.

Dozens of coaches from far and near have been mentioned, but the athletic board has recommended no one. Charles (Trusty) Tallman, freshman coach, is believed by many to have the inside track.

POND MAY GET JOB

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Jan. 27.—(AP.)—Raymond W. (Ducky) Pond, Yale football hero of 1923 and 1924, looms as the possible successor to Reginald (Reggie) Root as head coach of Yale football.

To Yale and Harvard men the vivid memory of Ducky Pond is of the touchdown he made through a sea of mud in the Harvard Stadium in 1923, which gave Yale the victory, 13 to 0.

The New Haven Register says Pond, whose home is in Torrington, Conn., will be named to the chief football position at the university, and with his selection will come a complete change in the coaching staffs, except that Root, alone to be re-engaged, will coach the Yale freshman.

The tentative coaching lineup as given by the Register has Alfred Earl (Greasy) Neale, former baseball star with Cincinnati and Philadelphia in the National League and a football coach at West Virginia Wesleyan, his alma mater, Marietta College and West Virginia, as coach of the varsity backfield.

The others would be Bennie Oosterbaan, former Michigan star and end coach, in charge of the varsity ends, and Jack Blott, Michigan line coach, as coach of the forwards.

By JESS CARVER

Some 27 years ago, or back in 1907, Pitt, then Western University of Pennsylvania, and West Virginia inaugurated basketball relations. The Panthers, (Wups they were then) won that first game, 44 to 16.

Since then, the Pitts and Mountaineers have clashed 37 times and the Panthers have come out with 24 victories. Tonight's clash here in the Stadium Pavilion will be Sleepy Glenn, the thirty-eighth of the series (what mathematics! what mathematics!) and judging from all appearances, Pitt is due to hang up its twenty-fifth victory.

PITT ON FRONT

Tonight's contest is an Eastern Intercollegiate Conference affair and affords the home boys a swell chance to greatly strengthen their position as pace-setters. The Panthers have won all three of their Conference starts, knocking down Georgetown, Temple and Carnegie Tech in the order named. West Virginia, which has played only four games all told, two of them Conference tilts, have a .500 batting average. They lost to Carnegie Tech, which Pitt defeated with ease, but downed Georgetown.

This year's Mountaineer varsity is coached by Marshall (Little Sleep) Glenn. The Glenn boys, Big and Little Sleepy, were so named because they were about as alert a pair of athletes as West Virginia ever produced, not excepting Ira Rodgers. Glenn succeeds the Francis Stadsvold, who handled the basketball doings at Morgantown for nigh on to 15 years.

DUKES TACKLE THIEL

Seeking their twenty-fourth victory in as many starts, Duquesne's Dukes invade Greenville tonight to take on Thiel College's Lutheran passers.

Thiel always has given Duquesne quintets trouble. Back in the days when Labe Wardle and his mates were tossing 'em for the Thiellans, the locals used to have to keep the power turned on all evening to emerge on the long end of the tally.

ANOTHER FOR GENEVA

Carnegie Tech's varsity basketballers might as well have been at the movies the early part of the second half of their game with Geneva here last night as far as their own scoring, or the preventing of the Covenanters was concerned.

Watters Recovering From Operation

Sam Watters, vice president of the Pittsburgh Baseball Club, is in St. Margaret's Hospital, where he is recovering from an operation performed in the region of his nose.

The operation was performed yesterday to correct a sinus ailment. Watters passed a restful night and expects to leave the hospital within the next few days.

Willigs Withdraw From County League

The McKeesport Willigs, who have made a runaway race of the first half of the Allegheny County League schedule, will give up their franchise for the second half of the championship season.

At a meeting of the league last night, Lefty Saunders, manager of the team, announced that due to the fact that he cannot arrange for games with outside teams, because other managers of league teams will not change playing dates, that the Willigs had decided to withdraw from the circuit. The team will finish out the first-half schedule, however, meeting the Homestead Jenkins five and Fintex.

College Heads Favor Faculty Sport Control

HARRISBURG, Jan. 27.—(AP.)—Pronounced sentiment in favor of forming a state conference to place control of athletic eligibility in the hands of the faculty was expressed at the annual convention of the Pennsylvania Association of College Presidents.

A committee headed by Parke R. Kolbe, president of Drexel Institute, submitted its report on a meeting held in Harrisburg earlier in the month at which preliminary plans for organizing the athletic group were made.

No action on the report was necessary, but a number of the presidents said they are in favor of faculty-controlled athletic eligibility.

It was upset day in Section II of the City Scholastic League yesterday and as a result three teams are deadlocked for first place in the section. Teh teams behaved in form-following fashion in Section I, South maintaining its great pace to record its sixth victory in as many starts.

Carrick, Allegheny and Perry turned in surprise triumphs in Section II, the victory of the Carrick entry being the most astonishing. Led by Math, star forward, Carrick defeated South Hills, 36 to 30, to beat the Hillsmen down to a mark of four games won and two lost. Math tallied 15 points, getting seven field goals.

Allegheny turned on the steam to defeat Langley, 33 to 26, the defeat being the second of the week for the losers. Tusturici's play featured Allegheny's win, the forward star accounting for 12 points. It was Tusturici's last game.

Perry battled its way into the three-way tie by defeating Oliver, 41 to 22.

In Section I, South made it more plain than ever that no matter which team comes out on top in the other division, the Washabaugh machine is going to retain its city crown. Although pressed from the start the South Siders defeated Fifth Avenue, 31 to 26. Schenley walloped Peabody, 45 to 23, Connelley knocked off Westinghouse, 33 to 21, and in an intersectional tussle Allderdice nosed out Allegheny Vocational, 30 to 27. The lineups:

CHILLYSAUCE

By CHARLES J. DOYLE

The moist pitch is to stay in baseball, it would seem . . . The saliva toss is to be ruled out soon, if one wishes to be literal in his speech, but the same pitch is likely to remain in the sport as long as the pitchers are cunning . . . Burleigh Grimes and Red Faber are not the only pitchers throwing wet pitches in the majors . . . Quite a few of the lads use the "dipsido" pitch by getting their H20 from another source.

Perhaps you have heard how they do it . . . Ervin Brame told me of a outstanding star of the American League who uses the freak offering . . . Erv was in the same minor league with this pitcher and he can do the trick himself . . . It is not so hard, especially on a hot day . . . Just as the catcher returns the ball, the pitcher in a natural manner wipes the beads of perspiration from his forehead . . . Then as he grabs the ball in his glove he rubs in the water just as a spitballer applies the saliva . . . The batter might kick, but few umps will sustain the protest.

It seems fitting that many of us should admit that John Blondy Ryan is a real major leaguer . . . In pointing to Blondy's batting average of .238 for the season, we have neglected to state that John Blondy was swinging at the deadest ball the Heydler circuit has used in many seasons . . . Ryan batted less than 10 points below the brilliant Hughey Critz and he was within 10 points of Sunny Jim Bottomley, who is a recognized slugger . . . Pinkey Whitney, another fine batter, finished the year with a card of .250. As a fielder, Ryan was all over the short field.

Charley Reilly, a Pirate fan since the days of the Buccaneer pennant glory at the turn of the century, has to laugh it off since he became entangled in an argument with one Edward Abbaticchio. Reilly insisted that Jack Chesbro was a left-hander and he backed his opinion to the extent of 20 smackers . . . Matt Trabert held the stakes, but he didn't have to carry them around long before the patient came out of the ether . . . So Abby and his pals are living the life of Reilly, so to speak.

WEST VIRGINIA FACES PITT

of the troupe, Paul Gibson and Capt. Red Silverman, the Skibos held the Genevians all even at 12-12 during the first half. In fact, had Red and Paul been in there, the home boys might have enjoyed considerable of an edge.

As the second period got under way, however, something went awry—plenty awry as far as Tech was concerned. Geneva stepped out and rolled up 17 points, while Tech was getting two, which is a very nifty way to put a ball game on the old ice. The advantage thus established enabled the visitors to coast to the decision, which they did. The edge tally was 38 to 27.

LITTELL BIG STAR

Duane Littell, Geneva guard, was big gun of the Covenanter attack. He dumped six field goals and a brace of fouls for a total of 14 points. Art Grahame, veteran footballer, was close behind with four buckets and two fouls for 10.

In the preliminary, the Carnegie Tech freshmen defeated a team of Tech all-stars, including a flock of footballers, 45 to 33. The lineups:

Three Cueists Tied For Tourney Lead

H. L. Rumstay, North Side pocket billiard star, has forced a three-way tie for the lead in the annual West Penn pocket billiard championship tournament.

Rumstay last night defeated Harry Reibert, of East Pittsburgh, who holds the present high run record for the tourney of 34.125 to 106, in a thrilling match at the Ritz parlors, downtown. Trailing by 34 balls in the forty-ninth inning, Rumstay rallied to click off 28 in the fifty-fourth and then won out in the next inning.

Parks Wins $16 In Coast Tourney

Artillery Riders Face South Park

The starting lineup:

South Park.		Artillery.

WEBERS MEET MORGANS IN ICE FRAY

CITY HOCKEY LEAGUE

GAME TONIGHT

J. Scott Morgans vs. H. J. Webers, Duquesne Garden, 8:30 p. m.

STANDING OF THE TEAMS

	W.	L.	G.	OG.	Pts.
Morgans	3	0	16	1	6
Pirates	2	1	10	5	4
Webers	1	2	5	11	2
Ravens	0	3	4	15	0

The J. Scott Morgans, undefeated pace-setters in the City Hockey League, will be out to tack two more points onto their lead when they meet the H. J. Webers at Duquesne Garden tonight.

The Morgans, whose defense has yielded only one enemy goal in three games, downed the Webers, 4-0, in the opening game of the season, and they are top-heavy favorites to repeat.

Frank Curl, the Morgans' spare goalie, who had no opportunity to break into the lineup because of Scully's sterling play, will make his competitive debut tonight—in the Webers' net. He has been loaned to the Oaklanders for the remainder of the season.

The Morgans, too, have been strengthened since they last met the Webers. Jeff Coulter was added to the East Enders' defense forces only last week.

Tonight's game marks the start of the second cycle in the league schedule, each team having met all other foemen. There still is some question as to whether Carnegie Tech and Duquesne teams are to be given league berths. It was reported today that should the Tartans decide to compete, they will not appear as official representatives of Tech, but as an independent organization. To night's probable lineup:

Morgans.		Webers.
Scully	G	Curl
McSorley	D	Campbell
Tyson	D	Schumm
R. Schooley	C	McNeil
Powell	W	Kelly
B. Schooley	W	Briggs

CENTRAL LOOP TEAMS CLASH

By TOM BIRKS

Soccer fans have four games scheduled in the Central District League this afternoon for their entertainment. Old Carnegie makes an effort to overtake the Arsenal eleven by wishing at Aliquippa, the Arsenal outfit being idle.

One of the best games of the day should be on tap at Ambridge where Clan Douglas, under the leadership of Adam Miller, faces the Bridge Workers. At the present time it does not look as if Ambridge or Douglas can play themselves into the league championship, but the game should be very interesting.

The Pittsburgh Rovers hook up with the Union Switch and Signal eleven at Swissvale, and the Dunwick Rovers outfit clashes with Beltzhoover at Leslie Park.

Tomorrow the best game of the day will be at Greenlee Field when Morgan and the Castle Shannon Riehls meet in a Keystone League clash.

Vines Takes Lead In Tennis Series

SAN FRANCISCO, Jan. 27.—(AP.)—Ellsworth Vines, lanky Pasadena star, went into the lead in his professional tennis duel with big Bill Tilden as he defeated the old master here last night, 6-1, 3-6, 4-6, 6-3, 6-1.

SPORT VIGNETTES

So Old Man Willie Petrolle is through with the boxing wars after his decisive defeat by young Barney Ross in New York the other night . . . Well, that's the second time . . . He quit several years ago, and, after a layoff, came back better than before, and they say he returned that time to help out his manager, Jack Hurley, who was ill and needed money for an operation . . . Hurley is a swell fellow, one of the finest in the business, and he and Petrolle always have been pals.

Remember that terrible bout Petrolle put up against Tommy Grogan at Greenlee Field here, last summer a year ago? . . . Looked as if he could take Grogan any time he wanted to, but he let him get away in the early rounds and they messed through the entire 10 . . . Shortly afterward, this writer saw Billy box Tony Canzoneri, then still the lightweight champion, in Madison Square Garden, New York, and Tony won as he pleased . . . For 10 rounds he allowed the fight to be fairly close and interesting and then he stepped out and clinched it in a decisive manner, but he didn't knock out Petrolle.

Now, Petrolle never has been famed as a boxer . . . He won his vast following with his punch . . . That night against Canzoneri (and this was 14 months ago), he hit Canzoneri flush on the chin many times as Tony stood up and mixed with him . . . But the old zip was gone from that wallop . . . The hop was off the fast one . . . The fight was just a breeze for Canzoneri . . . After it was over, Manager Hurley told the newspaper boys the weight had killed Billy . . . "That's what was wrong with him in Pittsburgh, too," he said . . . "He'll never fight again as a lightweight." . . . Now that the lightweight champion has given away weight to Billy and beaten him, Hurley says it's all off all of the way . . . His Fargo Express has reached the end of the line . . . He was a good old engine while he was running, but he's been moved over onto a sidetrack now . . . At that, it's a wise fighter who knows when he's through . . . So few of them do.

Jock Sutherland and Elmer Layden got to discussing the football rules at their little party at the P. A. A. a few nights ago, and everything was okay with them until they got around to the possibility of changing the forward pass rule to allow passing from anywhere behind the scrimmage line, as the professionals do now . . . With many a despairing gesture both agreed this would be probably the most terriblest thing (simply terrible doesn't begin to describe it) that could happen to college football . . . "The things those backs could do with that ball, passing it back and forth behind the line—just think of it!" said Jock. "Why, you'd see about two off-tackle plays all afternoon." "And your halfbacks wouldn't dare to move up on defense," said Layden . . . Finally both agreed with Howard Harpster, the Tech coach, that it wouldn't be a bad idea to permit the rules to stand pat for a few decades or so to give the fans, players, coaches, officials and newspapermen a chance to get acquainted with them.—HARRY KECK.

Leon See's Amazing 'Inside Story' of Carnera's Career

EDITORIAL FOREWORD

Having won on a foul from Stribling at London in a crowd-thriller after which the Italian giant was likened to "a dangerous tiger" by one fight critic, Carnera is preparing for a return match, while his manager pauses to reflect on his champion-making Idea as it has operated thus far.

By LEON SEE

CHAPTER XI.

In sincere fights we have been the victims of the directing powers and we have suffered the most scandalous vexations and injustices.

Ten times our purses have been confiscated without any reason.

Each time, when an encounter was on the level, as far as I was concerned, we were accused of cheating and the public cried: "Fake!" You will read more of that later, especially in connection with our American tours.

Primo Carnera

But that is not the only angle to my fight planning system—

Let me repeat it: I have never done any harm to anybody. I am proud of the fact that we have annoyed only the so-called boxing authorities.

A boxing fan said to me recently:

"The most exciting fight I ever saw was the return match between Carnera and Stribling in Paris. I will never forget it! It was extraordinary! I swear that I do not regret the money I spent!"

Was this man hurt? Is a thrilling show such a heinous fraud?

Did my secret spoil the spectacle for this man?

The only scruple — the only thing I deeply regret—is to make that man lose an illusion. However, it will be impossible for me to take away the pleasure which he enjoyed at that match.

As you read these truly "inside" revelations of the so-called "fight game," Mr. Average Reader, please don't jump to conclusions—to judge and condemn before you have weighed all the evidence concerning showmanship and fraud in boxing and similar sports.

Please understand that I believe the real culprits are those who let men engage in murderous fights out of which too often winner and loser come out equally disfigured, shaken, when not definitely cracked.

Sincerity in sport is admired by me as much as anyone when it is a question of tennis, fencing or billiards. I must repeat it: For long years I have struggled with energy against pugilistic faking.

I was like you, Average Reader, in good faith—like you, perhaps, inexperienced. I thought that a great fight was one where both boxers fought a merciless battle. Did it matter if they were injured as long as there was a thrill? I believed that too long. I have recognized my mistake. Fighting is barbarous.

CONSCIENCE CLEAR

The public wants strong emotions. Well, who is the real culprit? Is it the one who gives the fans the desired thrill at the expense of the health, the intelligence, and the future of the two opponents? Or is the one who provides that same thrill, greater still, more complete, without having two men tear each other and half kill each other?

As for me, my opinion is definitely formed. My conscience is at rest. I am proud of what I have done.

What I mean by showmanship is best demonstrated in Carnera's second go with Stribling at Paris in November, 1929. That was a new high for a crowd-pleasing fight in Europe . . .

THE SECOND SET-TO

Well, my "Preem" was declared winner on a foul over Young Stribling in the fourth round of their London set-to, in October, 1929. Naturally the great American heavyweight was in the melodramatic role of seeking "revenge." The public clamored for a return match which, of course, I had planned in advance of their first bout. This time, our show was scheduled for Paris, just 15 days after the London thriller. It was a perfect publicity setup from the promoter's and our angles. And that Paris performance deserves considerable description. In the midst of that rip-tearing scrap occurred one of the most comical episodes in ring experience. It was unnoticed by experts and public at the ringside. Now I will describe it accurately, and publish it for the first time.

I had planned that, at the end of the sixth round, Carnera, having been dominated in the beginning of the match, should suddenly take the offensive, but—deafened by the cheers of the crowd—he would not hear the gong. So when Stribling, who had heard the bell, ceased fighting, my infuriated behemoth should rush toward him and drop him with a single ox-felling swing. Then Primo would be disqualified and would lose the decision; while, on the other hand, he would seem to many to win by an ill-timed knockout.

STRIBLING BOXES

This "revenge" match attracted a crowd without precedent. The Velodrome d'Hiver, at Paris, was packed on the night of the fight.

Stribling had arrived from America preceded by a superb reputation; he was rated in the same class as Jack Sharkey, one of the most qualified claimants to the title. On the other hand, Carnera had won all his fights in Paris with an ease evidently ridiculous and so the public was not far from believing him to be a supernatural being—a superman of boxing—who would defeat Stribling as he had done all those who had dared to face him.

The battle started; and then—exactly according to my tactical expectations — Stribling limited himself to dominating on points, without ridiculing his gigantic adversary. When the American's advantage was becoming too conspicuous, particularly when in the third round, he sent my Monster of Maul down with a light left hook to the jaw, Strib paused all of a sudden as if weakening for an instant. . . .

PRIMO INSTRUCTED

During the minute rest preceding the sixth round which, according to my secret plan of drama, was to be the last, I whispered to Primo:

"Now, pay attention to what I tell you! During the third minute, gain the upper hand. I have my watch in my hand and 10 seconds before the end of the round I will shout 'Go, Primo!' At this moment you will rush, giving him all you can with both hands unceasingly. Above all, don't stop when you hear the gong. Don't worry about the rest."

Everything went well during the two first minutes, with Stribling, a boxing artist of superior skill, having a great advantage over the green giant. The later took some hooks somewhat harder than he would have desired, but he faced the storm courageously, although a little dazed. Then, when my novice at last took the upper hand in the third minute, Primo did better than well.

Ten seconds before the end, running around the ring, in order to be within hearing distance of my pupil as he moved around., I shouted with all my might: "Go, Primo!" But the circumstances had exceeded my expectations. Seeing that Carnera had suddenly taken a seeming decisive advantage, after having been visibly in danger at the beginning of the sixth round, all the spectators who idolized my giant jumped to their feet with enthusiasm. They shrieked and howled encouragement, making such a terrific din that . . . my man completely lost his head . . .

FORGETS ORDERS

The gong rang and Stribling dropped his hands to return to his corner. Primo did likewise! He had forgotten my instructions.

The scene which followed during the minute rest was indescribable. As soon as Primo sat down on his stool I said to him:

"What took hold of you? Why didn't you do what I told you?"

"Oh, that's true! Excuse me, Mr. See, but I completely forgot . . . and with that infernal noise I could not hear a thing."

Turning to Primo, I said:

"No joking now; try not to forget at the end of this round or we face disaster."

"Do not worry," replied Carnera, "this time I will think; but, above all, cry loudly: 'Go, Primo!' I won't forget."

The seventh round was almost an exact repetition of the sixth. Carnera, undoubtedly to make up for his error in the preceding round, literally exceeded himself. He heard my signal and fell on his rival as he had done in London, becoming in an instant that other character—the "killer of men," the blood-thirsty beast—and after the stroke of the gong he continued to hit like a madman.

SUPERB THEATER

That moment was indescribable. It was superb theater! Primo was sublime! What a scene! Pa Stribling bounded into the ring to protect his writhing son whom the now wild-eyed Carnera threatened to strike when down. The referee attempted to intervene. My growling giant sent him into the ropes with the back of his hand. My seconds and myself rushed to subdue Primo. One having seized him by the body, I clung desperately to one wrist. He shook us off like a wild boar set on by a pack of hounds.

In the huge hall all the spectators were astir. Volcanic emotion was erupting—women were shrieking; men fell from the chairs where they had been perched . . .

Primo was quieted not without difficulty, Stribling came to, and, silence having been obtained with the greatest difficulty, the announcer was able at last to declare the decision:

"Carnera disqualified; Young Stribling, the winner."

CROWD GOES WILD

"It's shameful! it's not his fault if he did not hear the gong!"

Thousands of others acclaimed Stribling, howling their indignation over the foul. In several parts of the hall, spectators were fighting among themselves. Never in the memory of sportsmen has an evening of boxing brought such a triumph!

The next day the newspapers devoted columns to the "terrific combat." All Europe took a deep interest; Italy was in effervescence. The promoter was delirious with joy.

One of the greatest Parisian caricaturists—Louis Gerard Berings—published the next day in "le Matin" a sketch remarkable for movement and life, represent-Carnera subdued with great difficulty by his handlers, and Stribling stretched at his feet!

In technical defeat, my Big Boy was more than ever the sensation of the day! !

By PAUL G. SULLIVAN

The final full card of interclub competition loons for this afternoon as Class A and B contestants in both the Pittsburgh Squash Racquets Association loop and the City Handball circuit go to the post in important struggles of the waning campaign. Wind-up of play in the Class B racquet division features the program.

The Class B squash finale, originally slated for last Saturday, but postponed out of deference to the Pittsburgh Golf Club racquet events, brings together P. A. A. and the P. G. C. on the former's courts and calls for a visit of the Keystone contingent to Edgeworth.

Meanwhile, in Class A, McCook Reed and his Keystone No. 1 outfit stand excellent chance of edging into top position while P. A. A. remains idle. The Keystoners are at home to Allegheny Country Club, tail-enders in the race, and a 5-0 verdict for the Downtown aces would advance them to the front by the margin of half a match. In the other upper contest, Keystone No. 2 visits Pittsburgh Golf Club.

Among the handballers a crucial Class A fray impends between Y. M. C. A. and the Keystone in the latter's domain. Victory for the K. A. C. by 4 to 1 will elevate the Keystoners to the apex and jolt the

STOCKS SHOW ONLY MINOR CHANGES

NEW YORK, Jan. 27.—Stocks generally showed minor changes in the first hour today. Trading was quiet, but the list displayed a tendency to stiffen following initial easiness. Tobaccos moderately extended their improvement of yesterday. Alcohols were steady, but rails were a bit mixed.

American Tobacco B, Liggett & Myers B, Schenley Distillers and American Telephone improved around a point. Bethlehem, American Machine and Foundry, Nash, United States Industrial Alcohol, New York Central and Standard Oil of New Jersey were unchanged to slightly higher. Fractional losses were shown by Allied Chemical, Santa Fe, American Can, Chesapeake and Ohio, United States Steel and Electric Auto-Lite.

Wall street was not surprised that the Senate backed the President in the monetary bill test. While in banking circles there was considerable sympathy with the amendment which would have created a board to handle the $2,000,000,000 stabilization fund, few financiers believed that the administration's desire for Treasury control would be overridden.

Washington advices on the somewhat indecisive character of the report on stock exchange practices were being studied carefully by exchange members. Although a number of leading brokers have become resigned to federal control of speculation, sooner or later, the belief was gorwing that important legislation of that character might not be enacted at this session. Given more time, it was also thought that the exchange board of governors might adopt further restrictive measures which would tend to make governmental regulation largely unnecessary.

Overnight news that the Federal Reserve Bank of New York had released $5,162,700 of foreign gold from earmark was interpreted as an exchange of metal held here for gold purchased by the bank abroad. The bank authorities gave no explanation of the earmark release. At the same time there were many conjectures as to the amount of gold which has been bought by America in London and Paris for the purpose of depressing international dollar rates.

The British pound sterling, which displayed rallying tendencies in late trading yesterday, was up 2¼ cents at $4.98¼ in opening transactions. The French franc also firmed 01½ of a cent at 6.23 cents.

DOLLAR VALUE QUESTIONS ANSWERED

By LEWIS HANEY
Professor of Economics, New York University.

NEW YORK, Jan. 27.—Today I will try to answer some of the inquiries and comments concerning money, which I receive from readers.

One man from Michigan undertakes to reply to my challenge to figure what our paper dollar is worth. He insists that the dollar will buy what the law prescribes in the case of fixed public utility services, postage stamps, milk and NRA labor.

Well, what if that were true? Prices are not "fixed" for most food, clothes, housing and fuel. The very fact that he picks cases of price fixing shows that he is trying to get around the fluctuations in the purchasing power of the dollar.

CAN'T FIX VALUES

When a government fixes the price of electricity or railway service, it merely says how many dollars we must pay. It does not say how much each dollar is worth. So we find other businesses raising prices and our dollars don't buy so much clothing.

In time, the railway and utility companies find their dollars buy less fuel and labor, and then either rates must be fixed higher, or they give us less for our dollars.

The plain fact is that the government can fix a "price" in dollars, but it cannot fix the "value" of anything. The value depends upon how much buyers and sellers think it is worth to them.

Some people think that the government has fixed the price of gold. This is not true. The government merely buys some gold at a price. But (1) the world gold market does not agree with the government's "price." (2) The government's price is not effective for us, because we cannot buy any gold.

TRUE WORTH HIDDEN

I say that you don't know what your paper dollar is worth, even in gold, because you can't find out by trading them for gold. Just try it.

"I will fix the price of shoes at $20."

You could buy plenty of shoes at your price, but you could not make other people do it.

A New York merchant asks:

"If our currency is stabilized at 60 cents, does that mean revaluation, or does it mean that the government is buying gold on a higher ratio, presumably lowering thereby the purchasing power of the dollar?"

In the first place, our currency is not stabilized at "60 cents." The government is talking about "60 per cent" as much gold in a gold dollar as there used to be. But it is not going to issue any gold dollars.

CENTS NOT SOLUTION

Anyhow, you don't know what a "cent" is worth. A cent is just a fraction of a dollar. Its value depends on the value of a dollar. When the purchasing power, or value, of the dollar goes down, the cent goes down, too. So it does not help us any to call it a "60-cent dollar."

In the second place, nothing thus far done means revaluation. In order to revalue the dollar in gold, it will be necessary (1) to fix exactly the quantity of gold in the gold dollar, and (2) to allow exchange of paper dollars for gold dollars.

As long as we do not know exactly how much gold is in a gold dollar, and especially as long as we cannot trade our paper dollars for gold, we will not know what dollars are worth in gold. There will be no revaluation. The government is merely paying a large number of dollars for an ounce of gold, mostly abroad.

If we do revalue the dollar on the basis of a 60 per cent cut in the size of the gold dollar, the man who owns $10 will still have to pay "$10," but each dollar will be worth 40 per cent less than formerly. At least, it will be worth 40 per cent less gold, and if prices rise in proportion, paper dollars will fall that much in purchasing power.

MINE WORKERS REJECT LABOR PARTY PLAN

INDIANAPOLIS, Jan. 27.—(AP.)—The United Mine Workers' convention here has refused to indorse the formation of a labor party.

A resolution from Mt. Carmel, Pa., seeking such indorsement, was referred to the mine union's delegate to the next convention of the American Federation of Labor "for such action as deemed best at that time."

The convention adopted a resolution opposing the Hitler regime for its "ruthless action against organized labor in Germany and especially the unwarranted treatment received by the officers and members of the German miners' federation at the hands of the Hitler government."

An appeal to the miners and coal operators to join forces in fighting the common enemy represented by competitive fuels was made by C. B. Huntress, executive secretary of the National Coal Association. It was the first time on record that an official of the coal operators' organization has addressed a biennial convention of the miners.

The convention adopted a resolution approving the Tennessee Valley project of the federal government.

It also indorsed government ownership and control of coal mines, but declined to concur in a resolution opposing any "move to make the United Mine Workers of America a government-controlled organization." This followed a statement by William Sneed, a member of the resolutions committee, that the union had "no need to fear dictatorship by President Roosevelt."

Shields to Speak At Calvary Church

Mark Shields, political commentator of the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph, will be the speaker at the civil night exercises in Calvary Episcopal Church, Shady avenue, tomorrow evening.

MUSIC

Pittsburgh Symphonic Ensemble

PROGRAM

Theodora Overture ..... Handel
Concerto Grosso, F Minor ..... Scarlatti
Largo ..... Veracini
Fuga in A Minor ..... Bach
Holberg Suite ..... Grieg
Prelude and Fugue ..... Moskowski

The Pittsburgh String Symphonic Ensemble under Oscar DelBianco's direction again pleased a large audience in Carnegie Music Hall. The constantly fine attendance at this series of concerts is another good sign for Pittsburgh's music.

Mr. Lissfelt

The playing of the ensemble now remains of equal quality from concert to concert. Momentary lapses from correctness in the entrances make little effect on the general effect which this year has maintained a rather high standard. In the slow movements we notice a greater richness in tone.

The great interest lies now rather in the variety of music available for this combination of instruments. How else should we hear such works as Handel's "Theodora" or the richly scored concerto of the elder Scarlatti?

I question whether the many arrangements bear up under the new ensemble, for certainly Grieg's "Holberg Suite" is far more interesting in its original form as piano solo, far more scintillating music than in the heavier orchestration as heard last night. By the way, Tech's orchestra played it once before in Pittsburgh. J. FRED LISSFELT.

'Loyalty' Subject At Herron Avenue

The Rev. K. McMillan will speak on "Loyalty" at the 11 o'clock service of the Herron Avenue Presbyterian Church tomorrow morning.

BRADDOCK VOTE FIGHT HEARD

When the court hearing of James H. Rose's contest of the election of Fred Seim, Democrat, as Burgess of Braddock continues next Friday, the court will be told that an address at 514 Center street, Braddock, is a vacant lot.

The question of whether there was a house at the address became involved in the controversy when a witness held that the only other James Rose in Braddock lived there. A policeman answered in court that it was a vacant lot. And it is, photographs revealed today.

If there is no James Rose in Braddock other than the defeated candidate who is contesting Seim's election, then Rose is entitled, he says, to the 13 Prohibition and 14 No Party votes cast for "James Rose," and which will make him the winner in the election.

Makes You Feel Younger and Look Slender

Pattern 1757

Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph 15c Practical Pattern

If your figure demands that you choose your frocks very carefully, with an eye for lines and details to disguise the extra pounds, a model as flattering as this is noteworthy indeed. Here is the length-giving silhouette, aided by pointed seaming and a cleverly designed yoke, to make your figure appear more slender. You may keep in step with the vogue for contrast by combining lace or print with monotone for a smart effect. The sleeves have tight cuffs which may be omitted—and the popular flared sleeve worn as illustrated in the small view.

Pattern 1757 is available in sizes 36, 38, 40, 42, 44, 46 and 48. Size 36 takes 2⅞ yards 39-inch fabric and 1⅛ yards contrasting. Illustrated step-by-step sewing instructions included.

SEND 15 CENTS in coins or stamps (coins preferred) for this pattern. Write plainly name, address and style number. BE SURE TO STATE SIZE.

FOURTH DEGREE

CHAPTER XXI

Kirk Judson was standing on the porch arguing violently with Detective Mahler. Both men looked angry.

"Here, Capt. Andy, you deal with this fellow," called Mahler as we drove up. He turned on his heels as if washing his hands of Judson and all his machinations.

"What's the trouble now, Judson?" asked Anderson.

"He won't let me alone," complained the detective. "How does he think I'm going to conduct any investigation when he's infernally tagging after me? Why can't he let me alone for a minute? I'm not going to steal the silver!"

Anderson smiled. "That's one of the penalties of not working on the force," he answered good-naturedly. "Come on in the library, Judson. I have a couple of things I want to tell you and they'll put you in a good humor."

Once in the house, Anderson said frankly: "I'm going to tell you all we've learned, Judson, or all that I think you are entitled to know just now. I want you to look at these."

Cigarets Identical

He pulled the package of cigaret butts from his pocket.

"This fresh one belongs to Mrs. Katherine Phelps, who lives about a mile down the road to the south. She spent the evening with Mrs. Paige the night she was killed. You can see that the two are identical as well as the blotches of lipstick."

Judson examined them carefully and then whistled in surprise.

"Certain, Captain Andy?"

"Positive. I just took this one from Mrs. Phelps' own house and saw her smoking it. I also think that you should know that Mrs. Phelps was not alone here with Mrs. Paige. She was accompanied by Mr. Robert Cleveland of the Attorney-General's office."

"And what do they say?"

"I have had one talk with Mr. Cleveland who did not mention that he had seen Mrs. Paige recently. Mrs. Phelps volunteered the information that she was here, but says that she made a customary call and then came away. She knows nothing out of the ordinary."

"What'd she say about smoking these cigarets in the cellar?"

"I haven't mentioned the fact that any were found in the cellar and she doesn't know that I have this one of hers in my possession."

"I told you that this was the real clue," said Judson gleefully.

Sought by Paige

But Anderson shook his head. "You told me that the pearl was the real clue. Incidentally, Judson, I might as well let you know that we've discovered Paige's substitution of a paste jewel as well as his losses on the stock market."

Judson became serious instantly.

"I suppose that you blackmailed him into letting you in on this case?" continued the inspector.

"No, honestly, I didn't. I wanted to work on this case terribly for entirely personal reasons and while I was wondering how I could work it Paige himself called me on the phone and requested me to handle it."

"I suppose he wanted you to recover the real jewel for him before we discovered the trade?"

"Exactly. And I've already seen Paige and advised him to tell you the whole truth."

Judson hesitated.

"To be frank," he then said, "I'll tell you that I'm in trouble with the Attorney General's office. I thought a real conviction in this murder might help me out."

Anderson nodded. "I'm glad to get one truthful answer from somebody," he said. "I knew you were afraid of that indictment. Honesty is always the best way with me, Judson. You'll find that out before long. I'm sorry that you've helped Paige."

"Well, I'm not," declared Judson. "The boy is perfectly innocent. I've already said that robbery was the motive for this murder and I expect to prove it to you within the next 24 hours. You wait!"

"All right," laughed the Inspector. "So long, Judson. I'll be expecting to hear from you. Tell Paige I'll be glad to talk to him again and I'm glad that you advised him as you did! Come on, boys—we've lots of work to do!"

Letter Moved

As the three of us—Carroll, Anderson, and myself—started for the library, MacNalley, on guard at the door, spoke to the Inspector.

"That letter you wanted is here, sir," he said.

"That's quick work," commented Anderson turning to us. "I cabled Scotland Yard only five days ago concerning the Whitmore case and here's the answer. Where is it, MacNalley?"

"It's right up there on the mantelpiece."

"Right there propped up against the clock."

"Here it is on the library table," called Carroll, walking toward it. He was just about to pick it up when Anderson said sharply:

"Don't touch that!"

Carroll drew back as though the innocent letter with its official "Scotland Yard" on the outside held a bomb.

"Now, MacNalley," began Anderson seriously, "I want you to get this straight. Are you certain that you put this letter on the mantel? How long ago?"

"I'm dead positive, sir. Stuck it there a good half or three-quarters of an hour ago. I was sure that I wouldn't forget to tell you about it, but I knew I couldn't forget if I saw it staring me in the face there."

"Then someone has entered this room!"

"Another officer? One of the inspectors?"

"No, sir."

"Kirk Judson?"

"No, sir. Nobody."

"Believe in ghosts, MacNalley?"

Steamed Open

The patrolman hesitated. Obviously he was anxious to register a denial but he was equally anxious to avoid any trouble with possible spirits by inviting them to give a demonstration of their supernatural powers.

"Not certain," he mumbled at last.

Anderson burst out laughing. "That's right. Play safe, Mac. I would, too, Mac, if I were in your shoes, because here we really have a case in which a letter which you left against the clock has walked over to the table. The windows are all closed so that it could not have blown there."

"I guess he's mistaken," I said, for really the whole affair of the letter seemed very trivial to me. Wherever MacNalley had left it originally, it was here right now.

"It is plain," Anderson explained that Mac did leave the letter just where he said. Somebody—somebody who had a great curiosity to know what Scotland Yard was writing me about—took it."

He picked it up by one end gingerly and held it to the light.

"Yes, I can see that it has been more or less carelessly steamed open and then resealed. Here's luck, however, for there is a fairly good impression of a thumb-print—that of the thief, let us hope, and not that of the English authorities."

He drew a packet of powder from his pocket and began to dust it lightly over the envelope.

"Now, MacNalley," he said, "somebody did come into this room. You don't remember it, because the person who entered came in without asking and as a matter of course. You just took it for granted that it was all right. Could it have been one of the servants—Mrs. Deane, the housekeeper, or Peter, the gardener?"

Recollection came flashing into MacNalley's face.

Housekeeper Suspected

"It was the housekeeper, sir," he explained. "I remember now. She had her arms full of firewood. She brought two loads, the second about 15 minutes after the first. Is that her fingerprint?"

"Undoubtedly," replied Anderson. "I've picked up plenty of hers around the house and this one appears similar. Now let us see what the lady wanted to know from my letter. She liked it all right or she wouldn't have bothered to return it to me."

He ripped it open taking care to handle the envelope as little as possible.

Within there was an official communication from the London police relative to an inquiry of Anderson's five days earlier.

His eyes skimmed over it and then he put it carefully in an inside pocket.

"Absolutely nothing," he said listlessly. "I hoped I might learn something."

Then his eyes brightened.

"But there's one thing we mustn't overlook," he commented. "Mrs. Deane is an English woman. She wanted to get hold of this letter because she thought it concerned her and she forgot to figure that I couldn't possibly have gotten a letter from London as soon as this after Mrs. Paige's death."

"That means that she's got a record over there and was afraid we had it. If she did not have, she wouldn't care how many letters I received from Scotland Yard. We'll shoot this fingerprint over there to them and I'll cable them meantime to look her up. Probably she's changed her name but this finger-print will do the trick if they have it on record."

Synopsis

Sonia (Sunny) Paige, wife of socially prominent Randolph (Ranny) Paige, is found hanging by a silk dress cord from the chandelier in her boudoir. An autopsy reveals that Sunny had been suffocated first with the tassel of the cord and then hung. Mrs. Deane, the housekeeper, says the night of the tragedy was her night off and that Mrs. Phelps, a neighbor, was to spend the evening with Sunny. Inspector Anderson is furious when Ranny employs Kirk Judson, a shady private detective, to investigate the tragedy. Anderson and Judson decide to forget their antagonism and work together. Anderson questions Mrs. Phelps. A face peers in the window. Anderson thinks Mrs. Phelps tampered with Sunny's desk when the police sought the intruder. Robert Cleveland, prominent attorney and friend of Paige, seems anxious to help the young man. The police learn Mrs. Phelps saw Cleveland the night of the murder.

STRESEMAN, GERMAN REPRESENTATIVE, ADDRESSING LEAGUE OF NATIONS (1926) International News Photos

The League of Nations is an assembly of representatives of nations. Their covenant provides: 1, an assembly, with one vote for each represented country; 2, a Council consisting of representatives of Great Britain, France, Italy, Japan and four others (later nine) elected by assembly; 3, a secretariat, a permanent office at Geneva.

The League administers international territories (Saar Valley, Danzig, Fiume, etc.) supervises governments of mandated territories (former German colonies, new-coined countries in Near East).

The League of Nations succeeded in preventing several minor wars, fixing borderline troubles between smaller countries, securing international loans. However, it is far from perfect, especially in arbitration aims. (World History)

OLIVER ASKS FOR MORE

In his famous novel, "Oliver Twist," Charles Dickens shows us the miseries of poorhouses and crime in its repulsive truth. Left orphan in the poorhouse, Oliver grows up with more whippings than food. Committing an incredible offense by asking for more after a meager meal, he is given to a "mortician," who exploits him in his coffin shop, capitalizing his sad appearance as a mourner. (Eng. Literature)

THE HARDING-COOLIDGE ADMINISTRATION

The strain of adjustment from war to peace with abrupt breaking of truces between capital and labor resulting in strikes, soldiers' demands, high cost of living, Bolshevistic unrest and a disintegrated cabinet—together with his battle for the League of Nations—broke President Wilson's health before the 1920 election.

President Harding succeeded him (1921). He made peace with Germany; called the Washington Disarmament Conference; restricted immigration; revised tariff upward. Returning from an Alaskan trip, Harding died suddenly in 1923. Vice President Coolidge took his place.

Business flourished, monopolies grew, but farmers' discontent increased. Trouble with Mexico (1925) were allayed by Ambassador Morrow's diplomacy, whereby foreign titles to Mexican land, acquired prior to 1917, were perpetuated.

USES OF CELLULOSE—RAYON, CELLOPHANE

Cellulose of cotton linters or wood is used as raw materials for artificial silk. Most of it is made by the viscose process. After purification and bleaching cellulose is treated with concentrated caustic soda (NaOH), then with carbon disulphide (CS_2), which converts it into a gelatinous, soluble mass, cellulose xanthate. Solution of this—a viscous fluid, called viscose—is aged, filtered, and forced through a nozzle with tiny openings (spinning) into a hardening bath (H_2O, H_2SO_4, $NaHSO_4$). In this bath the xanthate decomposes again to cellulose, but with a silken lustre.

By extruding viscose in a layer into the hardening bath, then leading the resulting sheet through a cleaning and one glycerine baths, the transparent cellophane is obtained. (Chemistry)

HUMAN BLOOD—WASTE ELIMINATION FROM BLOOD

Human blood (about 1½ gallons in an adult) is a fluid, plasma, in which red and white corpuscles float. Red corpuscles (about five million pr. cmm.) are spongy discs, filled with red protein haemoglobin) containing iron. This unites in lungs with oxygen and is carried to capillaries of body where oxygen is liberated and, together with food, secretions of ductless glands is given to lymph (mostly plasma and white corpuscles) for distribution to the body cells.

Lack of sufficient red corpuscles (anemia) can be cured by a diet of liver and medicines containing iron and trace of copper. White corpuscles (4,500-13,000 pr. cmm.), moving cells, surround germs, etc., and devour them. Dead, they form pus, sign of fight with germs. Fibrinogen in blood, when exposed, forms fibrin, a clot, plugging the wound. Tourniquet between heart and wound stops arterial (spurting) bleeding; if veinal (steady flow), wound should be between heart and tourniquet. Waste materials from blood are excreted by lungs (CO_2), sweat glands of skin (water, urea, salts, fatty acids), liver (changes ammonia to urea, excretes bile), kidneys (urea, salts, water). (Gen. Science)

Bugs Baer

Buggsy, the Well Dressed Man

But, we got a shock when London printed its team of handsomely gowned men and omitted The Bug's name.

We were instantaneously disappointed and mortified to the freezing point. Nevertheless, we got honorable mention from the League of Second Hand Dealers.

We figured we had our delapidated trousseau polished neatly and firmly. But we swatted one fly in the ointment when we saw that the Prince of Wales was also missing from the dapper scroll.

We don't know what sartorial blunder was established by Eddie. But, we do remember that his royal daddy was eliminated from the stylish masquerade for pressing his trousers on the side, instead of having the crease down the middle.

The thousand little tailors refused to pardon him for that lapse in haberdasherial navigation. Some of the boys who made the dry cleaned varsity this year included Sir John W. Buchanan Jardine, of the Coldstream Guards, which never surrendered no matter what they think. There is also Lord Cholmondeley who was once treed by an elephant in a potted geranium.

The only American on the list is A. J. Drexel Paul, of Philadelphia and the Biddies. If you haven't heard of the Biddies you must now. The Biddles are the oldest society family in America. A Biddle once spoke to The Bug. We were very flattered until we discovered that he was the nearsighted master of the Drexel Hill hounds.

No other local boy was named as delegate or proxy. There was a time when Jimmy Walker could have made the grade in a flour barrel. And it would have been a pushover for Senator J. Ham Lewis, of Illinois. We don't know why they overlooked Grover Whalen.

The Bug's collective contribution to good dressing is the grapefruit knee, the buttonless vest and the synchronized patch. When a stranger sees The Bug in town he immediately looks around for the freight car.

We expected to make the illustrious list next year. If London ignores us we will tie the bonnet ribbons under the chin and consider offers from Paris.

ONCE OVERS

By J. J. Mundy

Parents don't be so anxious to save your children from hardship.

Too many young people reach maturity without having had any serious struggles or disappointments.

Not compelled to do any thinking or planning, or expend any energy to overcome obstacles, they live and eat and play along, care free.

Naturally such a child is poorly equipped for life's struggles.

Not compelled to think, they come to the conclusion that life owes them a living, accept the idea and mental and physical laziness is the result.

They have no strength of character to influence action in a crisis.

But more than likely the person so brought up will be swept under before he or she realizes the danger and the need of stamina.

Are you being kind in the wrong way to your children?

From War's Agony Comes Lesson of Preparedness to Maintain Peace

NOW it can be told, and now it can be SHOWN.

The truth, the full and brutal truth, about the great World War.

The plain, unvarnished truth as revealed in unretouched photographs, and not the false, misleading glamour as presented in pictures painted less for art or truth than for propagandist purposes.

Only the pomp of war is shown in most of the paintings reproduced in color for use as recruiting posters. They are designed to catch the eye of adventurous youth and to inflame it with visions of the glories to be won on the field of battle.

They show the warrior wading through blood, but with never a spot of it on his shining armor or tailor-pressed uniform.

Always the high lights, but never a note of the grime and filth, the slush and vermin of the blood-soaked and foul-smelling trenches.

Youth, ambitious youth, must not be shown such things in battle pictures. They must not even be hinted lest they interfere with enlistments.

And the truth kept from the young must also be kept from mothers and fathers. Their sleepless nights, spent watching and waiting for word from the front, must not be rendered still more agonizing by visions of the grim realities of war.

BUT the camera has changed all that. It has killed the glamour of the battlefield, eliminated its imaginary glories, and in their stead set forth the repulsive and revolting facts.

Thanks to the photographer, we may now see what those at home never before had seen: war as it really is and not as it is painted by artists and poets.

The man behind the camera is not in the pay of the propagandists of warfare. He is not employed by a recruiting officer.

Often, very often, he must sneak upon the scene he is about to take, and even when permitted to work he may not be permitted to show what he has recorded—at least not until the war is over.

The last war having been a greater war than all others, involving many nations, the photographers have been so much longer delayed in displaying their pictures.

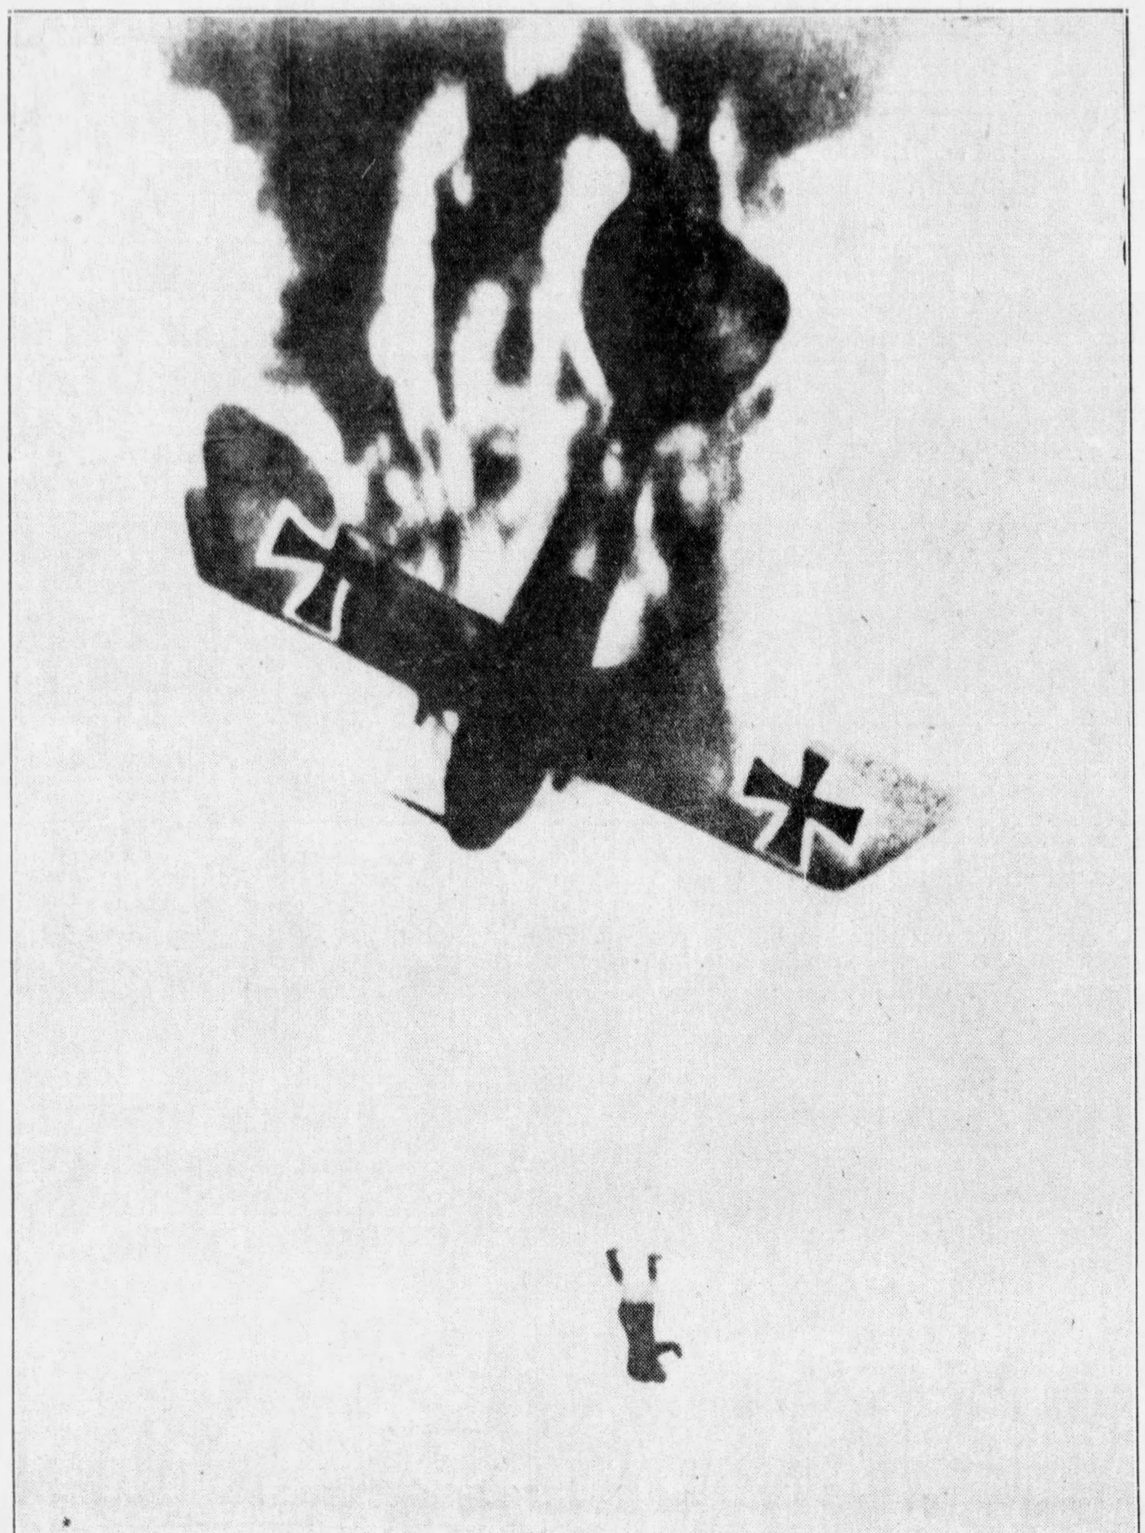
But now they can be shown, and tomorrow in the Sunday Sun-Telegraph there will be shown some more UNCENSORED PICTURES of the WORLD WAR.

These pictures are taken from the book "The First World War," edited by Laurence Stallings, author of that disillusioning but intensely dramatic play "What Price Glory?"

There is a purpose in the reproduction of these pictures—the patriotic purpose of so displaying the horrors of modern warfare that its abominations may be kept vividly in the minds of our people and serve them as a dual warning:

(1) A warning as to the necessity of keeping out of foreign conflicts and out of the entanglements which would lead us into them; and

(2) A warning as to the necessity of putting ourselves in a position to defend the nation against any invader of our shores or aggressive violator of our rights.



A German ace, his fighting plane in flames, who chose to jump to a kindlier death on the ground rather than perish in a flying furnace. He was photographed from the British plane he had engaged in desperate battle. This is a copyright Cockburne-Lang picture, published in advance from among those in tomorrow's Sunday Sun-Telegraph's second installment of spectacular war pictures—five full pages of those collected by Laurence Stallings and Floyd Gibbons.

THE pictures to be reproduced in THE SUN-TELEGRAPH are all pictures taken on foreign soil of a foreign conflict into which we were drawn against our better judgment—disregarding the warning of Washington to keep out of foreign wars whenever we were able to do so.

The truth about the World War includes, or should include, the facts as to foreign propaganda conducted in this country not only IMMEDIATELY before, but LONG YEARS before, the date of our participation.

Foreign agents, lecturers, journalists and resident international bankers had been for many years preparing the way and smoothing the path to American participation by cajoleries and commitments.

Having helped to get us into the war, they tried to get us to accept and ratify its peace treaty, a treaty diplomatically as scandalous as the war itself was horrific. To have ratified the Versailles Treaty would have committed us to participation in one or other if not all the foreign conflicts which it made inevitable.

It would have made us party to the situation so graphically described as the change from a post-war to a pre-war period.

Failing to drag us into ratification of this infamous war treaty, the foreign propagandists strove desperately to drag us into the League of Nations, and every picture to be shown in the UNCENSORED series in THE SUN-TELEGRAPH is a reason to be deeply thankful that we were not drawn into the League of SOME nations against SOME OTHER nations.

KEEPING out of the League and out of the League Court and out of ALL FOREIGN ENTANGLEMENTS is one of the surest ways of KEEPING OUT OF FOREIGN WARS.

But it is not enough to keep out of foreign wars; we must KEEP FOREIGN WARFARE OUT OF AMERICA, and for that the only way is ADEQUATE PREPAREDNESS.

We must be able to defend ourselves against any foreign foe.

To fail in self-defense is to fail in everything and to present our civilization as a gift to some foreign invader.

The UNCENSORED pictures of the World War to be reproduced in THE SUN-TELEGRAPH are brutal in their unflinching, unretouched realism. But if they cause the observer to shudder they will also cause the American observer to THINK.

And a little THINKING is all that should be necessary to keep America out of foreign conflicts, out of foreign alliances and entanglements, and to set us well on the way to national defense forces adequate to ANY emergency which may threaten us from ANY quarter.

Congressman Ellenbogen Presents a Plea for Flood Control—Brief Comment On Local News.

*It remains to be seen how much influence Con*gressman Henry Ellenbogen has with the administration at Washington. But he deserves credit at any rate for his effort to persuade Public Works Administrator Ickes to appropriate for flood control on the Monongahela and Allegheny rivers the funds obtained by the PWA through cancellation of dilatory projects.

Mr. Ellenbogen apparently used in his appeal to Mr. Ickes the same arguments that were advanced by the Sun-Telegraph a few days ago in speaking of Pennsylvania as "the forgotten state." In view of our population, the number of our unemployed, and the contributions that we make to the United States Treasury, Pennsylvania is entitled to a far larger share of the PWA funds than has so far been allotted to us. And the money could be spent no more wisely than on flood control for the tri-state area.

*As if in answer to the Sun-Telegraph's com*plaint that the early history of Pennsylvania is neglected in the public schools in favor of the early history of New England, Dr. Ben Graham has announced that a new history will be introduced which does Pennsylvania justice. We are informed the new text is a reader for the Sixth grade and has three chapters devoted to Pennsylvania. The teachers should be prepared to supplement this with additional information.

Asked the names of the ships that brought the first permanent white settlers to Pennsylvania, and the name of the governor of the first permanent colony, 35,000 Pennsylvania teachers, to whom C. Hale Sipe, the Butler historian, was lecturing on the subject, were unable to answer. But they knew all about the Mayflower. A prominent Pennsylvania educator has the effrontery to say that our colonial history does not compare favorably with that of New England in its permanent effect on the development of the nation.

When we think of the narrow-minded bigotry and ignorance of the Puritans who settled Massachusetts, of their execution of "witches" and persecution of "heretics," and then consider the conduct and noble principles of the Quakers, Germans, Swedes, and Scotch-Irish who settled Pennsylvania, we wonder how anyone can question as to which history is the more worthy of study. Certainly for Pennsylvania children Pennsylvania's story is more important.

NEW YORK DAY BY DAY

By O. O. McIntyre

NEW YORK, Jan. 27.—I'm about washed up riding around in taxis. That horrible fascination watching the mounting meter does something to me. Look, I'm limp as a rag! If a driver doesn't throw up the flag starting I'm consumed with suspicion he's going to nick me down to the quick.

If he circles the block on account of a one way street I'm convinced he is trying to take me a few blocks ride by way of Atlantic City. When a driver turns to chat I relax a little. But imagine his talk is just to make me feel so-high when I squawk.

Another ember of my Scottish fury is fanned hot by hat checking. I can't forget these privileges are farmed out in a cold-blooded way to rascally Tarzans who often do not pay the pretty girls livable wages. They shrug to these maidens: "After all, you get into close contact with rich gentlemen!"

I flensed the covers off the bed this morning, impelled by a fierce to-do to lash out a column steeped with sarcasm for these persistent American indignities. But this X marks the spot where my anger did a fade out. I must finish up with something in gentler vein. Just a softie.

I am determined not to puff into a pout the rest of the journey. All sweetness and light. And tweedle de dee. Fred Stone telephoned today about a trivial matter and I was impressed by the booming vigor of his voice. Fred is not an old man but he is getting along. Yet his voice has the bark of a college coach, as fresh as a January calendar.

* * *

Voices have hypnotic quality. Bernhardt's dove-like throatiness gave me a floaty feeling of suspension in mid-air. While voices with a rasp bathe me in icy dew, like the squeak of a rusty hinge. The most melodious voice I ever heard was a telephone girl's in a hotel at Coronado Beach. The oscine tone of far away temple bells. I used to lift the receiver and ask ridiculous questions for this soothing effect. But she mistook my interest. One morning she replied with: "Well, if it isn't my New York sweetie again!"

There was a certain allegro timbre to Richard Mansfield's voice that was his greatest stage charm. William Faversham at one time had the finest voice on the stage, with Holbrook Blinn as a runner-up. And no actor in America excelled Blinn for diction. Spring Byington and Gracie Allen have a brookish babble, Dorothy Hall a childish whimper and Pauline Lord's lost whippoorwill murmur in tragic moments is the most poignant exhibition of restrained vocalism. In the talkies I like the raw-edged thunder of Wallace Beery and George Bancroft. And when I hear the husk of Lenore Ulric and Patsy Kelly I want to turn tough. Go to Minsky's and hell around with a nickel cigar! Mae West's whine has made her a million. Katharine Hepburn's big tug is her file-like rasp.

My wife was chiding me today about an incident in my life that I give especial plume when relating to others. The essential facts are correct, but I dude it up with certain imaginary hot-diggedys that are somewhat a strain on credence. Yet I believe with Robert Louis Stevenson that a good true story deserves a high hat and cane.

I wonder if docks and wharves are tinged with melancholy for others, too. Courtney Cooper and I, awaiting a liner, prowled about the West street water front the other day. The first wharf I ever visited was, hand in hand, with an uncle. We had gone to see the body of a citizen, drowned in the Ohio. I had but a single glance and turned sick. To this day a dock or pier-end brings vividly before me the puckered oyster white of a horribly bloated face.

* * *

Then, the cloying odors of the water front—the nauseous aroma of brackish water, the effluvia from driftwood and green scum and decaying whiffs of wet rope. The most disgusting word in all the language is the only one describing them. It is on account of odors I could never have William McFee's enthusiasm for the sea.

* * *

Of all tastes, I think none compare to these three—the light tang of cinnamon, the brown crust of cold fried chicken and the zip of very young onions. So I have wavered haphazardly through the column today without again losing my temper.

Andrew Bahr's Long Trek With a Herd of Reindeer—The New Emperor of Manchukuo

By Edwin C. Hill

FAR up in Yukon Territory of the Canadian Northwest a rugged little man named Andrew Bahr, clothed in furs, sits by his campfire while his Laplanders and Eskimos ride herd on 3,000 reindeer. And Andrew Bahr, smoking his pipe by the leaping flames of his night fire, thanks his lucky stars that his long trek from Alaska, over the roof of the world, is nearing its end. Sometime next May, if all goes well, he will deliver the great herd to representatives of the Canadian Government at Kittigazuit, just east of the Mackenzie River Delta, and after one of the strangest adventures of modern times.

It is four years and one month since Andrew Bahr rounded up 3,000 reindeer on the Kotzebue Peninsula, away up in the Arctic Circle.

This drive of reindeer from Alaska to feed and clothe starving Eskimos in the Mackenzie River region is one of the epic stories of the times, making one think of the great cattle drives that used to take place in the old West.

It was four years ago that the Dominion government contracted with the reindeer kings of Alaska, the five Lomen brothers, for 3,000 reindeer for the Eskimos of the Mackenzie delta. The improvident Eskimos, equipped with the white man's rifle, had destroyed or frightened away the caribou which was their very life. Famine and misery descended upon them, and Canada went to the help of her strange children of the old Stone Age.

And so Andrew Bahr, greatest of reindeer herders of the Far North, assembled the herd and began the long trek in November, 1929—through swamps and forests, over mountains and rivers, swinging in a wide circle close to the Arctic Ocean.

Month after month and year after year the great herd moved southward, almost as slowly as a glacier marches to the sea, ever-flowing southward under the flickering green and purple of the Northern Lights—old Andrew Bahr riding at point.

How some of the old-time cowboys, silver-haired now, and stiffer in the joints than they used to be when they forked the meanest sun-fishing cayuses that ever clamped teeth on a bit, would have liked to have been with Andrew Bahr on that amazing drive of the reindeer!

Manchukuo Regent To Become Emperor

IT was just 25 years ago, one stormy night, that a 3-year-old baby, whimpering from sleepiness was lifted from its gorgeous bed of ivory and jade and satin, clothed in regal silks and placed on the throne of China. That tiny, sleepy baby was Suan Tung, the tenth and last of the Emperors of China, the last Son of Heaven to occupy the Manchu throne.

And now we hear that once again Suan Tung, with whom Destiny has played curious tricks—who has been, indeed, the very football of Destiny—is to play the role of an Emperor; this time, Emperor of the new state of Manchukuo, carved by the imperial power of Japan out of old Manchuria. For the baby Emperor, Suan Tung, is now Mr. Henry Pu Yi, who has been regent of Manchukuo and who is to be crowned as Emperor.

Twenty-eight years of age now dressed in cutaway coat and striped trousers, Mr Henry Pu Yi has rather the look of a spectacled bookkeeper than the last of the Manchu kings and the first of a new dynasty. Ever since 1924 he has been the creature of Japanese ambition and intrigue, and around him the determined sons of Nippon may be planning to build an empire far larger even than Manchukuo, which is as vast as all the territory which runs from Hudson Bay to Pennsylvania and from New York to Chicago.

For there is more than a suspicion that the Japanese armies will be on the move by spring, surging southward into broken, distracted, miserable China, overrunning and conquering provinces now under the heel of looting Chinese bandit generals, establishing a new world in a very old Asia.

The 50-60 Cent Dollar

In granting the President the right to devalue the dollar as much as 50 per cent, Congress intended that he alter the gold content of the dollar to this extent.

Congress felt that 50 per cent devaluation was essential to the nation's best interests.

It believed the President would best be able to determine the proper time to make effective such change in the dollar.

Apparently President Roosevelt has come to the quite proper conclusion that stabilization of the dollar should take place now.

But the President will be making a serious mistake, which might upset all the good he already has accomplished by his courageous and intelligent handling of the money problem, if he devaluates the dollar to ONLY 60 per cent of its forme value.

These same reports claim a "60 per cent dollar" is th compromise agreed to by the President AND the British gov ernment and their satellite international banking friends in thi country.

In return, say the reports, the British will stabilize thei pound and their pro-British banking allies in this country pledge themselves to underwrite the five or six billion more dollars our government will need to finance its needs over the coming year or so.

Since when did President Roosevelt deem necessary or advisable a compromise with the British government or its banking colleagues in this country?

Did not the British government adroitly manipulate their currency downward—push the dollar higher and higher, all the time draining us of gold?

Have not the pro-British bankers here without a let-up fought devaluation of the dollar from the day President Roosevelt cut loose from foreign depressing influences upon our economy by suspending the dollar from gold?

They would have had President Roosevelt stabilize the dollar as far back as last summer, when the abortive international monetary conference at London failed to trap us into the fatal error of stabilizing the dollar at too high a level.

Today the outlook for United States business, for employment looks brighter than at any time in years.

The American people, having overcome the fright inspired by international bankers' propaganda aimed against devaluation, are solidly aligned behind the President in his brave and unselfish fight for the best interests of ALL the American people.

He must not stop the dollar-devaluation process at 60 cents, regardless of the urgings of international bankers or the British government.

He should, he must go on to the FIFTY per cent devaluation authorized by Congress.
